THE YELLOW, WHITE AND BROWN.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY ANNIE HINDLE.

Now, fellow-men, my words attend, and you will plainly see
That talent's but a worthless name, if mercenless you be;
That tho' you be all clever men, and stocked with common sense,
The world demands at all your hands pounds, shillings and the pence.

The President and Oakes Ames, and William Tweed se bold,
Would sink to labor's level low if they possessed no gold;
Then to gain the world's esteem, and to win its wide renown,
You must try to heap, and then to keep, the yellow, white and brown.

When you walk out on a Sunday morn dressed in your working-suits,
The rich turn up their noses then, as if you were but brutes;
They do not look beneath your coats, where honest bosoms beat,
For dress, you know, in high and low, can cover all deceit;
But should your clothes be new, and your hat and shoes look smart,
They rank you with the middle class, as men of skill and art;
And should you jingle keys and things while walking through the town,
With lifted lip they bow and smile to the yellow, white and brown.

The greatest knave and cheat on earth as sterling worth may pass
If he can show the golden glow, the silver and the bras:
He may get drunk, may curse and swear, and wade in pools of sin,
The world winks at his wickedness—because he's got the tin;
The diamond pin upon his breast, a gold watch at his side,
And the eagles shining through his purse his secret evils hide;
With lords and ladies he can dine, for wealth begets renown,
There's magic in the words, "He's rich with yellow, white and brown."

Now, two fond hearts, as man and wife, may live in moneyed ease,
But let misfortune steal the purse, their love fades by degrees;
If Charles should fail to "raise the wind" to buy dear Kate a dress,
She sulks all day and turns away, and flies at his caress;
The house becomes a den at once, unfit for pleasure then;
She wonders what she saw in him, the ugliest of all men!
Disgusted—tho' no fault of his—he storms and knocks her down,
Oh, the Devil sure invented coins of yellow, white and brown.

'Tis money sets the world to work by ocean and by land,
Employs all kinds of handicraft all commerce to command;
'Tis fuel to the furnace-blast, machinery to the mill,
'Tis a motion, like the rolling globe, that never can be still.
In the full and empty purse 'tis a blessing or a curse,
Tho' each poor man to gain his share must labor like a horse;
But let us keep our spirits up, 'tis foolishness to frown—
Fate cannot shirk, if we but work the yellow, white and brown.

The miser, to increase his hoard, destroys his wretched self,
His spendthrift son soon makes it fly as it were worthless pelf;
While a thousand honest, noble hearts stalk famished thro' the town,
Who would have used, but ne'er abused, the yellow, white and brown.
So, friends, perhaps, you'll say with me that wealth's God's boon
When we obtain by toil and pain contentment fair and free;
But never let us stain our names, tho' we may starve and drown,
For honesty's a nobler wealth than the yellow, white and brown.

CHAPTER XXV.
PARDON!

It was evening, toward the latter part of the month of May, and his excellency Scipio Stamwood, Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, was seated in that part of his mansion devoted to his private business when away from the capitol. It was late in the evening, his family having retired, and he was entirely alone in his large cushioned chair, examining deeds, wills, bonds and other papers, that were strewn all over his desk, and half applied over the floor, apparently in inextricable entanglement. But he sat with his quill over his ear, his form encased in a handsome dressing-gown, his feet in slippers; and the golden-bowed spectacles resting upon his nose, his shiny bald crown, and the few thin silvery hairs around the base of his head made him the picture of the serene, refined gentleman of the old school, as he slowly placed the papers in something like order, examining patiently at each, just long enough to identify it. The hour wore on, and he was beginning to think about leaving the remainder of his work to complete on the morrow, when in the stillness of the night he heard a rapidly driven carriage stop in front of his residence, and he wheeled his chair around and muttered:

"Somebody is going to make me a late call."

The words were yet in his mouth when the knocker was struck with a violence that resounded through the entire mansion, and the next moment a liveried servant brought a card with the name of Frederick Janeway upon it, and the words penciled beneath:

"Your Excellency will be doing me an obligation that I can never repay by granting me an instant interview upon business of the greatest importance."

Short was the job, for James was the instruction of the governor when he had read the lines; and, as the servant vanished to perform his duty, something like a frown darkened the genial face of the official as he muttered:

"More about the pardon business, I am sure. He was the counsel of the condemned, and it will be a great relief to my mind when this painful matter is ended. I have scarcely recovered from the shock that high-tempered Miss Appleton gave me yesterday. Ah! good-evening, Mr. Janeway, I believe."

He might well ask the identity of the man whom he rose to greet, for instead of the robust, rosy-cheeked young lawyer whom he knew so well and expected to meet, he saw a white, thin, trembling form, wrapped up to the neck in a heavy overcoat, though the evening was exceptionally mild.

"I can understand your surprise," replied Fred, as he let himself down in the chair which the governor indicated by a wave of his hand, "for I have been upon a bed of sickness for nearly six weeks, and have ridden all the way from Tideway to-day, thereby violating the express command of my father, whom my mother and myself got away from home to prevent a piece of strategy."

"And I hope your excellent father?" inquired the governor, twisting his spectacles in his fingers.

"Never better, thank your Excellency; but your time is valuable, and so I will come directly to the point. I have come to ask you to issue a pardon for Hubert Linwood, sentenced to be executed on the coming Friday—day after to-morrow—for the murder of Jacob Gorgitt and his wife."

"Of course," rep'ied the unmoved official, with a bland smile, as he still dangled and twirled his spectacles, "Mr. Janeway is too good a lawyer to make such a request without sufficient grounds to warrant him in so doing."

"I understand my duty too well, your Excellency, I trust, to make such a demand without substantial cause therefor. Had I come for mercy, I should have requested a reprieve, not a pardon."

"I will look over with pleasure whatever affidavits and evidence you have to present," was the reply in the same imperturbable voice.

As Fred began fumbling in the inner pocket of his great coat he said:

"I concluded not to trouble you with the affidavits and evidence, which are all in the hands of Judge Hardenburg, who presided at the trial of Mr. Linwood. He requested me to hand you this note."

The governor replaced his spectacles upon his nose, turned his side toward the lamp, and carefully unfolded the unsealed note, which ran thus:

"To His Excellency Governor Stamwood.—Frederick Janeway has this evening placed in my hands evidence which unmistakably proves the entire innocence of Hubert Linwood of the crime of which he has been convicted, and of the same one of which I positively established the guilt of Jubal Higgins, residing near Ravenspur. Accordingly, I have this evening issued a warrant for his arrest and placed it in the hands of two officers, thereby discharging that duty, and therefore will no longer withhold the pardon which is now demanded by right and justice."

This, written and signed in the unmistakable handwriting of Judge Hardenburg, was read through twice by the governor before he laid it down. Then he dropped it on his desk, and looked curiously at it a moment, lifting it up, turning it over, and examining every portion. This done, he cleared his throat, and from one of the recesses of his huge desk he drew forth a folded paper, partly printed, and he occupied several minutes in filling up and attaching his signature and the seal of the state thereto. All the time that he was thus engaged, neither he nor his visitor spoke a word. The latter understood what he was engaged about, and he was content to wait with patience. Finally the document was in the shape, and the governor wheeled his chair around again, and handed it to Fred with the remark:

"Of course, there is no gainsaying such a note as the Judge has sent me. It gives me pleasure to hand you the full and free pardon of your client Hubert Linwood, and I wish you and him all happiness. But this is an extraordinary case; I kept run of the trial, and nothing seemed more clearly established than the guilt of Mr. Linwood, and yet you have succeeded in overthrowing it all just in time to save your friend, whose hour of execution comes within the next forty-eight hours. If you have the time and strength, I should like to hear a brief resume of this last evidence."

Although Fred was impatient of his time, he could not refuse this request, and he compiled in as succinct a manner as possible.

"From the first I was really convinced of Mr. Linwood's innocence, and when arrested I set to work to discover the evidence that would acquit him. This was as difficult that I purposely suppressed what little I had gained during the trial, in order that I might complete it afterward; and you see how near I came to missing it entirely through my sickness, which has kept me helpless for weeks. The first clue I gained was the pistol, discovered by the present occupants of the house. As my father had preserved the two bullets extracted from the slain couple, I compared them and found they fitted exactly; and as the weapon was a strange one, found upon the scene of the tragedy a short time after its commission, this was strong evidence that it was the one with which the deed was committed. I next learned that Jubal Higgins had been at this house searching the premises, and had made inquiries about the pistol. This of course directed my suspicions to him, but I was unable to do much, as the trial was then close at hand. I saw upon the finger-guard of the pistol, which was a costly and handsome one, three letters carefully engraved. These were "R. R. R.;" and, as they bore no correspondence with his name, I was at a loss what to do for a time. But I had scarcely a doubt of Higgins' guilt, and upon reflection was enabled to recall many corroborating circumstances that had escaped my attention up to this time; but I went through the trial with no more positive evidence than I have given your Excellency, which, you see, would scarcely have amounted to anything at all, and I feared would shut me out from any success in my after-investigations.

"Well, the trial was ended, and I had received other revelations pointing toward the same man. Such, for instance, as what Miss Evelyn Hawlett told me, that she had heard him walk the floor, muttering to himself, as if in great distress of mind; and once or twice, when he imagined that no one heard him, he had confessed to himself that he did the deed. Higgins was present during the trial, and, of course, most intensely interested in the proceedings. He seemed to have a haunting suspicion that I was upon his track, despite every precaution I used to prevent his discovering it; and he called at my office for no other purpose than to sound me. Well, as soon as my client was remanded to prison, I posted off to Tideway, where I completed my chain of evidence. By a secret visit to the house of Jubal Higgins, I secured his family Bible, in which I saw recorded the name of his father-in-law, Richard R. Rankin; and not only that, but actually the note itself which accompanied the gift of the pistol to him; so that the ownership of the fatal weapon was traced to Higgins beyond all question. On this same evening I came across a negro, who had really seen Jubal Higgins leave the overseer's house upon the night of the murder, had positively identified him, and had been kept from giving his testimony, through the threats and money of the guilty man. This seemed to be everything that I needed; and although a white man cannot be convicted in our courts upon the evidence of a slave, still that evidence, if received, may serve to strengthen and uphold the other in the minds of the jury, and has a powerful moral weight, as it had in the trial of my client, where I did not object to its being given, and where, beyond all doubt, it was that which convicted him, despite our laws to the contrary.

"Thus matters stood, and I was preparing to make an important move in the business, when I was placed hors du combat by my sickness. This, however, was a most providential occurrence, as it resulted unexpectedly in accumulating still stronger evidence for my side. During my prostration and delirium no one visited my room but my parents, and from my ravings upon these hours the old gentleman finally learned all I had done, what testimony I had collected, toward whom it pointed and the line of conduct I had laid out for myself. Up to this time my father had been intensely bitter against my client, of whose guilt he entertained not the slightest doubt; but, when my reason returned to me and I lay exhausted upon my bed, he quietly informed me that he knew precisely as much as I did, and that he was ready to make oath that Linwood was innocent and Higgins was the guilty man. The old gentleman had been brought a great deal in contact with this man during the last few years, and he was able to recall a hundred confirmatory incidents, now that his suspicions were excited. Doctor Janeway having thus become a devoted ally of mine, henceforth we worked together—that is, as well as such a thing could be done, when I was unable to rise from my bed.

"But Providence too was working with us, and a couple of weeks ago father was at the bedside of a dying man whose home is back toward the mountains. This man, finding he was going to die, gave father a packet which he said he and a comrade had stolen from me some time before at Buzby's Inn, on the road between Richmond and Tideway, adding the startling declaration that it was the weapon with which Jubal Higgins had killed the overseer and his wife. Father gained all the information possible, and then came back, posthaste, for me to put it in legal shape. I dictated, he wrote, and was at his bedside again in a few hours, carrying several hundred dollars to his needy family, from the fund that had been entrusted to me for that purpose by Linwood. The poor fellow signed it, and a few hours afterward expired. This affidavit set forth that this man, in conjunction with a companion, whose name was given, and who will be called upon in the second trial, had been employed to take from me a certain pistol belonging to Jubal Higgins, and which I was known to have in my possession. They did rob me of such a weapon, but made a mistake and got the wrong one, the genuine pistol, which they were after, being still secure, where no one but myself can lay hands upon it. They had such evidence of their own as to prove the guilt of Higgins, and only by subsidizing them pretty liberally with money was he able to keep them in the background. Remorse at the approach of death had caused this man to unseal his lips, and his life was prolonged enough to permit his testimony to be put in legal shape. This simple document is of such a damning character as of itself to insure the conviction of Jubal Higgins. Judge Hardenburg stated as much after examining it, and said that his note to your excellency was justified by the affidavits alone.

"This, I believe, concludes the substance of the testimony that has been placed in the Judge's hands, and which there can be no doubt will secure the punishment of the guilty criminal, who has permitted an innocent man to rest so long under a cloud of suspicion, and who would never have raised his voice to prevent his being hung therefor."

"Can I be cheered by the hope that this respect may be in time changed to a deeper, tenderer feeling, if I remain true to myself?"

And, as he asked this question, he leaned over until his cheek almost rested against hers, while he tremblingly awaited her reply.

The royal, queenly beauty now dropped her grand eyes for the first time, and the pearly complexion was deepened to the temples by a crimson tint that stole up over the glorious countenance, like the creeping-up of the eclipse over the face of the sun.

"I will not say no," she murmured, with her eyes still down, and a slight tremor shaking her frame.

"Then will you not say yes?" he softly asked, as his cheek touched the warm, peach-like bloom of hers.

She said it so faintly that no other ears but his heard it, and he sealed the promise with a lover's seal.

"I am the happiest of men, I'm excitedly straightening proudly up. "I am young and poor, but am ambitious, and shall not ask your hand till I have earned a name and position that will entitle me to the consideration of your honored father—heigho! that's Hubert now!" he suddenly exclaimed, as he heard a faint click of the knocker.

"You admit him while I go up-stairs and prepare Evelyn," exclaimed the blushing, happy Alice, as she sprang up from the sofa and went hastily out in the hall and up-stairs.

The gentle knocker had not attracted the notice of the vigilant servant, and Fred Janeway took the liberty of admitting him, as he had been directed to do.

"Congratulate me!" he exclaimed in a joyous whisper, as he conducted his friend into the room.

"You needn't explain," laughed the latter, "I understand all that has taken place, and remained away longer than you directed for that purpose."

"Longer? It seemed to me that it is scarcely fifteen minutes since you separated from me."

"That's the way of it; but what about Evelyn?"

"Alice has gone to prepare her—oh! there they come now!"

Hubert stepped back behind the door, and, as the white, spiritual, fairy-like figure of Evelyn Hawlett came into the parlor, leaning upon the arm of Alice Appleton, she saw Fred Janeway only, and advanced and gave him her hand, murmuring her pleasure at seeing him.

"Let me introduce you to one who needs no introduction," he replied, as he reached behind the door and drew out the laughing Hubert Linwood.

Evelyn stared at him a moment without speaking, while he held out his arms.

"What does it mean?" she asked with a faint wildness in her looks.

"It means that he stands before you a man proved innocent of all crime," replied Fred Janeway, retreating and moving around so as to draw the arm of Alice within his own and leave the two free.

Evelyn made a convulsive movement forward and then paused, Hubert just catching her in his arms as the poor girl swooned dead away.

A servant almost instantly appeared with a vessel of water, and she speedily revived.

Then the four sat and talked and chatted as the happy hours glided away, and Alice felt compelled to forbid the gentle Evelyn remaining up any longer, and she advised her own "prince" to seek the rest which he so much needed.

So they departed, and just as Fred reached his lodging-place he saw the well-known gig of his father drive up.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, with a laugh, "if there isn't the old gentleman, sure enough!"

"You're a pretty scamp!" exclaimed the irate physician, as he sprang out of the carriage and seized his laughing son by the arm. "It was all a conspiracy that you and your mother got up to send me off a dozen miles in the country; but I suspected it after I got there, and I came back sooner than you thought and drove on right after you. What do you think of yourself?"

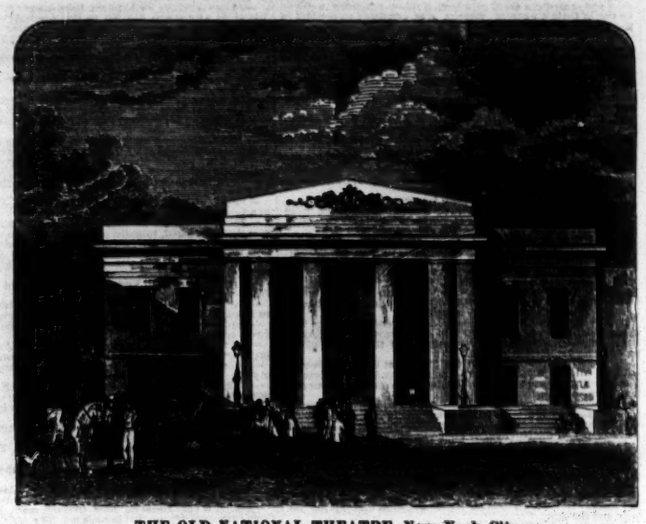
"Why, father, I am almost well; don't you see how strong and hearty I am?"

"Yes; you will pay for this to-morrow."

"And here is Hubert; don't you see him?"

The old physician, considerably mollified, turned and offered his hand to Hubert, saying:

"You have been shamefully abused, sir, shamefully abused, sir; but I am glad that you have been set right at last. I give you my congratulations, sir. That Jubal Higgins was a fiendish scoundrel, but he has met his desarts."



THE OLD NATIONAL THEATRE, New York City.

"I wonder whether there can be any truth in that," mused his friend, as with a rapidly beating heart he walked timidly up the broad marble steps, and steathily lifted the knocker.

In answer to his inquiry, the servant replied that he thought Miss Alice had retired, but he hurried up-stairs to make sure.

"She is reading in Miss Hawlett's room, and wishes to know your business."

"Hand her this," replied Fred, giving her his card, upon which he had pencilled the words, "Must see you at once. Say nothing to Evelyn just yet!"

A moment later he was ushered into the large parlor, where the lamps were still burning, and he had scarcely seated himself when Alice Appleton hastily tripped down the stairs and came in.

She was attired in a plain evening-dress and looked as imperially handsome and beautiful as an empress.

She started back as she saw the pale, thin face of Fred Janeway, and, clasping her hands with a scared look, said:

"You bring evil tidings, Mr. Janeway; I see it in your looks."

"You see the result of sickness and prostration only, for, I beg to assure you, I bring the best of news. Hubert Linwood was released from prison less than an hour ago, under a full and free pardon from Governor Stamwood, and the officers of the law are in pursuit of the guilty party."

Alice Appleton stood for one moment like a marble statue, and then, advancing to the transfixed Fred Janeway, I blush to say she threw her splendid arms about his neck and actually kissed him full and fair upon his cheek.

"I couldn't help it," she said, as she retreated, her face crimson with shame; "for you are the prince among men."

"I—I don't want you to help it," stammered and laughed Fred, whose face was as red as a peony. "I will ride fifty miles any day to receive such acknowledgments as that."

Alice blushed again, or, to speak more truly, she hadn't stopped blushing at all; and, seating herself upon one of the sofas, said:

"Tell me all about it; but you are sick and weak."

With a courage that was incredible, Fred actually walked deliberately over to where she was seated and placed himself directly beside her.

"If you will permit me," he said, with a laugh, "I feel greatly strengthened and improved by your reception, and in case my strength should give out I should like to be as handily near you as is agreeable."

She never objected a word, nor did she look displeased in the least.

"Tell me first Evelyn's condition," he asked.

"She is very weak; no particular disease, except, I think, a genuine case of broken heart—no mail remedy, I hope, since such a sovereign cure is at hand."

Sitting thus beside the "queen of his heart," Fred for the fourth time that evening went over the history of the past few weeks.

And all the time those magnificent eyes of Alice Appleton were fixed upon the pale face of the speaker, that gained color, and whose heart throbbed faster as the delicious experiences of his past existence in this evening.

He felt that he could talk the entire night beside such a queenly, glorious beauty; and, gathering courage from her gracious manner, he gradually stole his hand over upon her lap, until he had imprisoned hers, and, fondling it between both of his own, he went on with his narrative. When he had finished he said:

"May I ask whether the lady's favorable opinion you expressed of me is still retained by you?"

"Yes, and always will be," was her prompt, brave reply. "You have acted the part of a true, noble, devoted friend, and there is none whom I respect—not my own cherished father—more than I do you."

"Can I be cheered by the hope that this respect may be in time changed to a deeper, tenderer feeling, if I remain true to myself?"

And, as he asked this question, he leaned over until his cheek almost rested against hers, while he tremblingly awaited her reply.

THE OLD NATIONAL THEATRE, NEW YORK.

That edifice was situated on the northwest corner of Leonard and Church streets, and was originally erected for an Italian Opera House, by which title it was first known. It was architecturally attractive, but the location proved a bad one, owing to the surrounding neighborhood. The auditorium was different in arrangement from any hitherto seen in America. The second tier was composed entirely of private boxes, hung with curtains of crimson silk, and the first tier communicated with the balcony and pit, thus making the first advance toward the long-desired privilege of ladies occupying that portion of the house. The whole interior was pronounced magnificent, and, with the scenery and curtains, which were beautiful beyond all precedent, was the conjoint production of the distinguished Italian artists Bragaldi, Albe and Guidicini. The ground of the box-fronts was white, with emblematical medallions, and gold-and-panels of crimson, blue and gold. The dome was painted with representations of the Muses. The sofas and pit-seats were covered with blue damask, and the floors were all carpeted.

It was first opened to the public on Nov. 19th, 1833, when the opera of "La Gazza Ladra" was performed. The prices of admission were as follow: boxes, $1.50; sofa seats, 75; pit, 31, and gallery, 75cts., no other charge being made for securing seats. The opera company having shortly failed, the edifice was leased to Thomas Flynn and Henry Willard, who christened it the National Theatre, and opened it for dramatic purposes Aug. 20th, 1834. Flynn visited England for recruits, and among those he brought was William Abbott Bonnell, comedian, who afterward became well known as the manager of Mitchell's Olympic, and Charles Howard. Among others in the company were Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Thorne, W. F. Johnson, J. W. Wallack, Jr., Master Charles Burke and little Mary Gannon. While Ochsne began an engagement on Sept. 6th, and on Oct. 31 produced for the first time in America the ballet opera of "The Maid of Cashmere; or, Le Dieu et La Bayadere," which had a successful run. J. W. Wallack and J. H. Hackett played star engagements. On December 8th, the Ravels commenced an engagement, and on the same evening George Jones, now known as the Count Joannes, made his first appearance since his return from Europe, as actor Hamlet. The season ended on March 6th, 1837, as did the management of Mr. Flynn. J. H. Hackett then assumed the management and opened the theatre on March 20th, with "Rip Van Winkle," "The Kentuckian" and "Turn Out." On the 25th Cooke's Circus commenced an engagement, and equestrian dramas were given. The season closed May 24th, and proved unprofitable. The theatre then passed into the hands of the late James W. Wallack, who, assisted by his brother Henry as stage-manager, opened it on Sept. 4th, 1837, with one of the best stock companies ever gathered together in New York. It proved a marked epoch in New York theatricals. It was the first opposition to the Park that had not been quickly overcome. It divided the patronage of the public, and the improvements in the mounting and getting-up of even old standard plays were so great that the Old Drury of Charles Lee lost its supremacy as the leading theatre, and never again fully recovered that position. The company was as follows:—Messrs. Wallack, H. Wallack, Hield, "Robert the Devil" Brown, Barnes, W. H. Williams, Geo. Stanley, Morley, Horncastle, T. Matthews, J. Wallack, Jr., Garo, John Woodhull, Ben De Bar, Rogers, Hautonville, Baldock, Russell, Percival, Evarard, &c.; Miss Emma Wheatley, Miss Turpin, Mrs. Flynn, Mrs. W. Sefton, Miss Ayres, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Hautonville, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Baldock, Mrs. Evarard, Miss Sands, etc. A company so full and effective in every department had never before been gathered together in New York. The opening bill consisted of "The Rivals" and "The Unfinished Gentleman." The former was acted with such a strong cast that we give it in full:

Bob Acres	J. R. Brower
David	Their first appearance in America	W. H. Williams
Capt. Absolute	Mr. Wallack	Fag	Mr. Russell
Sir Lucius O'Trigger	Mr. H. Wallack	Languish	Mrs. Rogers
Falkland	Mr. Abbott	Julia	Miss E. Wheatley
Mrs. Malaprop	their first appearance in America	Mrs. Russell
Lucy		Miss Ayres

The next evening, Sept. 8th, Mr. W. Horncastle and Miss Turpin made their debut as Elvino and Amina in "La Sonnambula," supported by Morley as the Count and Mme. Otto as Lisa. On the 11th the elder Vandenhoff made his American debut, acting Coriolanus. Mr. Benedict De Bar, since a great favorite as an actor and manager in the south and west, here made his first appearance in New York. On the 23d Mr. Hackett commenced an engagement, appearing with "Col." Jack Barnes in their celebrated representation of the two Dromios. "Robert Macaire" was acted for the first time on October 13th, when J. R. Browne and "Billy Williams of the Veils" as the comedian W. H. Williams was popularly called, made their greatest hits as Robert Macaire and Jacques Strop, respectively. T. D. Rice appeared on the 17th in "The Virginia Mummy." On the 31st, for the benefit of Samuel Woodworth, a popular poet of the period, he was suffering from a partial loss of sight and attack of paralysis, among other attractions William E. Burton, the comedian, made his first appearance in New York, acting Timothy Quaintock. On November 3d Miss Mary Matthews, afterwards Mrs. Edward Eddy, made her debut on the stage, acting Emily Worthington in "The Poor Gentleman." On the 5th Mr. Porter, the Kentucky giant, 7 feet 6 inches in height, made his first appearance on any stage in "Gulliver in Lilliput," the other characters, with the exception of Lord Plinnap, which was acted by Major Stevens, a dwarf, 30 years of age, 3 feet 4 inches high, being performed by children. On January 6th, 1838, "The Love Chase" was acted for the first time in America, two days before its production at the Park. On February 19th Miss Mary Celia Taylor appeared as Cupid in the burlesta of "Zuccolmon," being the first individual character to which her name has been found attached. She afterwards became a great favorite at Mitchell's Olympic, where she was popularly known as "Our Mary." B. Booth commenced an engagement on the 20th. In March we find Hudson Kirby enrolled as a member of the company. On May 21st, little Miss Davenport, Mrs. Gen. Gaines' adopted, made her first appearance in America, acting the chief character in "Richard III" and Little Pickle. On June 14th Mr. Van Amburgh and his trained animals appeared in "Blue Beard." The season closed on July 4th. Mr. Wallack reopened the National on Sept. 3d, 1838, with Mr. Mitchell as stage-manager, sire Mr. H. Wallack, who had returned to Europe, and Edwin Forrest as the star, who acted Damon. Corson Jr. (Mr. Forrest), after acting as actor at the Bowery, Burton's and Barnum's, was at that time acting there under the name of Walton. On Sept. 27th Miss Celeste made a triumphant return to the New York stage, acting in "St. Mary's Eve." She then performed for the first time. On October 15th Mr. Edward Seguin, Mr. Wilson, Miss Jane Shirreff and Mrs. W. Pearson made their American debut in the opera of "Amilie; or, the Love Test." On Oct. 19th "Naval Engagements" was first acted in America. On Feb. 3d, 1839, Mrs. Anne Seguin made her American debut, singing Rosina in "The Barber of Seville." The season terminated on June 28th, and was resumed, under the same management, on the 19th, 1839, with Edwin Forrest as the star, acting Virginius. On Sept. 5th "Richelieu" was first acted in New York, with Mr. Forrest as the Cardinal Duke. On the 7th Charles Kean reappeared after seven years' absence, acting Hamlet. On the 9th Mr. Kean was advertised to reappear as Richard, but on the afternoon of that day the theatre was discovered to be on fire, and in a short time was totally destroyed, resulting in a serious loss to the manager and performers, many of the latter losing their entire wardrobes. Mr. Alexander Wilson, once a well-known actor in New York, became the lessee of the rebuilt National Theatre, Mr. Wallack having returned to Europe. It was opened on Oct. 28th, 1840, as the Olympic or New National Opera House. From the introductory bill we glean that a ladies' saloon and ante-room, painted in Oriental style, to correspond with the designs of the interior and furnished with ottomans, etc., led off from the dress-circle; that the private boxes were finished in the same costly style, and that a bell was attached to each box, so that immediate attendance, refreshments, etc., could be obtained without quitting the box. The proscenium drop-scene contained a portrait of Taglioni, Carlin and Fanny Elsler, and the grand act-drop represented the ruins about Taj Mahal Agra with the halt of the caravan, and was designed and painted by Charles Fehr. The admission to boxes was $1; pit and third tier, 50 cents; and gallery, 25 cents. Mr. Latham was stage-manager; Mr. Horn, musical director; Signor La Manna, leader of orchestra, and H. C. Timm, chorus-master. On Oct. 21st Miss Kate Horn appeared, and on the same evening Mr. and Mrs. Seguin sang in "La Gazza Ladra." On Nov. 9th William Wheatley made his first appearance at that theatre. Mr. Buckstone was engaged to play in the farces and made his first appearance on Dec. 8th. Business was so bad that the manager was compelled to close the doors early in January, 1841, until the 15th of February. Mr. and Mrs. Vandenhoff appeared. On March 12th the theatre again closed and Mr. Wilson retired from its management. It then passed into the hands of William E. Burton, who made his first attempt at management in New York on April 13th, 1841, assisted by F. C. Wemyss as stage-manager; Mr. Nexsen, from the Park, prompter, and W. H. Russell as treasurer. The spectacle of "The Naiad Queen" comprised the opening bill. Mr. Burton acted Schnappe, Miss Cushman the Naiad Queen, and Miss Josephine Shaw, Flavia. The latter lady became celebrated as Mrs. Russell, and still later as Mrs. John Hoey. The spectacle continued in the full tide of success until May 10th, when, in consequence of a previous arrangement with Mr. Booth, it was withdrawn for three nights to allow that gentleman to act Iago, Hamlet and Richard. On May 24th another spectacular drama, entitled "Semiramis," and that spectacle with "Love, Law and Physic" on May 29th constituted the last performances within the walls of the ill-fated National Theatre, which was discovered to be on fire at daybreak the next morning, and was speedily consumed, with all its contents. It was not rebuilt.

A SHORT SERMON TO YOUNG LADIES.

Ladies—caged birds of beautiful plumage, but sickly looks—pale pets of the parlor who vegetate in unhealthy atmosphere like the potato germinating in a dark cellar, why do you not go into the open air and warm sunshine and add lustre to your eyes, bloom to your cheeks, elasticity to your steps and vigor to your frames? Take exercise, run up the hill on a wager and down again for fun; roam the fields, climb the fences and leap the ditches, wade the brooks, and after a day of exhilarating exercise and unrestrained liberty, go home with an appetite acquired by healthy enjoyment. The beautiful and blooming young lady—rosy-cheeked and bright-eyed—who can darn a stocking, mend her own frock, command a regiment of pots and kettles, and be a lady when required, is a girl that' young men are in quest of for a wife. But your pining, wasp-waisted, doll-dressed, consumption-mortgaged, music-murdering, novel-devouring daughters of fashion and idleness, you are no more fit for matrimony than a pullet is to look after a brood of fourteen chickens. The truth is, my dear girls, you want less fashionable restraint and more liberty of action; more kitchen and less parlor; more leg exercise and less sofa; more pudding and less piano; more frankness and less mock modesty. Loosen your waist-strings and breathe pure atmosphere, and become something as good and beautiful as nature designed.

A FEARFUL VISITOR.

The Paris Soir relates the following story:—"A Mme. Bonneau, living in the Rue Descartes, was sitting in her parlor a few days since awaiting her husband's return to dinner, when a man of wild and haggard appearance entered, and, seating himself opposite to her, addressed her in the following terms: 'I am a great doctor. I can effectually cure all headaches. I have heard that you suffer from that cause, and I am come to cure you.' The lady, perceiving that she had to deal with a madman, prudently seemed to fall into his humor, and asked what was the method of treatment. 'Simple enough, madame,' said he, drawing a razor from his pocket; 'I cut off the head, and then, after having well cleaned it, I replace it upon the shoulders.' Upon this he prepared to suit the action to his words. Mme. Bonneau, with great coolness, professed her readiness to submit to the operation, but suggested that she would fetch a towel from the next room to prevent her dress from being stained. Her visitor assented to the reasonableness of this suggestion, and she left the room, locking the door behind her. Upon her return with some police-officers they found that the unfortunate maniac had cut his own throat, but not fatally. It was ascertained that he had escaped from a lunatic asylum at Clermont les Fres, and had been vainly sought during a whole month."

"NOW, MY little boys and girls," said a teacher, "I want you to be very still—so still that you can hear a pin drop." For a minute all was still, and a little boy shrieked out, "Let her drop!"

WAITER.—The Baron De Rouge-et-Noir.

Enter the BARON DE R.

UNCLE S.—Well, old hoss! I'm glad to see you anyhow. Better late than never! [Shakes his hand fiercely and slaps a wet quid of tobacco into it.]

BARON.—Sair, I am your servant most devoted. [Embraces and kisses him.] I tell him welcome and I wish him damn! [Aside.]

UNCLE S.—Jest squat yourself and make yourself at home. [Offers tobacco.] Don't chaw? I wonder what on yairth you foreigners air good for, anyhow! Well, perhaps you'll drink? [Pours out two full tumblers of raw whiskey.]

BARON.—Pardon! I drink not at all [with a grimace].

UNCLE S.—Don't use the article? Stranger, that won't do; you're in America now, the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave. Come, drink your drink or fight! [Draws Bowie-knife and flourishes it.]

BARON.—It will pleasure you? If it wair poison I would drink eet! [Strangles it down.]

UNCLE S.—Here comes my eldest boy, Jonathan. He's a tearer. Can whip his weight in wild cats and stand up under more licker than any man of his size from here to the jumpin'-off place. How do, Johnny? Here's one o' them pampered aristocrats you're so fond of wantin' to make your acquaintance. Guess I'll go out on the street and get up a fight, just to keep my hand in. [Spits in his hat, slaps it on, blows his nose on a handkerchief, with the Star-Spangled Banner printed in red, and exit, picking his teeth with his Bowie-knife.]

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

AN OLD BACKGAMMON PLAYER.—"In your answer to a correspondent in the CLIPPER of March 8th, I think you are wrong. According to the old established rules of backgammon, your decision should have been in favor of A. B, having thrown six ace, should bear the six and play the ace up; by so doing he plays the full amount of his throw, seven; whereas, if he played according to your decision, he only plays six, and all the celebrated players at the game say that you must play all you can."..... And yet we maintain that our decision is perfectly correct. B, having thrown a six and an ace, has the option of taking whichever he pleases. The case is very simple. In no other part of the game would it be disputed as to which point the thrower took first; but, because it is at a critical point, the opposing party would have the thrower confined to play to their interest.

KENTUCKY, Marietta, Georgia.—A, B, C and D are playing cribbage.—A and B partners against C and D. The count stands 27. C has a (two-spot, making 29, which was a go for H. D and B; C takes his go, one, then plays an ace, takes another go, 30; plays another ace, making 31; takes one for the go, two for the pair, two for the thirty-one, and one for the last card; he has pegged eight for his thirty-one. Who is right?".....C was not amitled to score a "go" for his 29, as he was able to play again. C would have played his two aces making a pair and 31, for which he was entitled to 4 points. When 31 is made, no point is scored for the last card; only 2 for the 31.

M. S. S., Newark, N. J.—Ned O'Baldwin was beaten by Andy Marlyn, but Georgie Ide and Marsden an! fought a draw with Joe Vormald. He was also matched with Wormald and Mace in England, though neither match came to a fight; in the first the stakes were given to Wormald, because O'Baldwin was not present at the starting place, and in the other the money was drawn. Mace having been arrested. Ned was also matched to fight Jim Mace last year, and they met in West Virginia, but failed to agree upon a referee, and the stakes were returned.

INQUIRER, Baltimore.—The failure to embody the resolution in the code of championship rules renders it a dead letter as far as the enforcement of the rule is concerned. To have made it effective the convention should have added a section to the championship code, requiring all games to be played only with a Ryan dead ball. As it is, no penalty can be inflicted on any two clubs for playing with any other maker's ball, provided it is of regulation size, etc.

GRINDLE CARER, Utica.—Daniel E. Sickles claimed to have shot Philip Barton Key by virtue of a confession made by his wife to the effect that she had committed adultery with that gentleman. An infidelity of the marriage vow; and his defence, stripped of its verbiage, was simply an appeal to the sympathies of the jury, in consideration of his having in a moment of frenzy killed a seducer.

E. J., Philadelphia, Pa.—1 and 2. Had you read the CLIPPER you would have known that Miss Agnes Ethel was a member of Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre company; also that she first acted as "Agnes" the present season, in the Union Square Theatre, and that since that date she has continued its performance. 3. Miss G. is in Chicago. 4. Cannot say.

NEWS DEALER, Pioche City, Nevada.—We cannot tell you where it was first produced in America, but the translation by George Andrew Darnay of that name was first produced in this city at the Broadway Theatre, on Dec. 25th, 1848, and enjoyed a run of fifty consecutive nights. That might have been its first production.

GUY TALLMAN, Baldwin City, Kas.—1. A, B, C and D having each played an ace, B is entitled to 2 for a pair, C to 6 for a pair royal, and D to 12 for a double pair royal. 2. A having played a 10, B a 4, and C 10, the latter cannot count anything unless it is a 5 or 3. At cribbage, the cut for trump or turn-up card goes before or to the left of the dealer; for the dealer, to his right.

STOUT, Fort Huron, Mich.—1. B, who has sold ticket, disposed of all shares or interest he held in the lottery-tickets of A, C and D, the latter reverting to A, who purchased B's ticket. 2. For training trotting horses order Hiram Woodruff's "Trotting Horse of America;" price, $2.50. For running horses, Stonehenge's "Rural Sports;" price, $9.00.

G. W. W., Pittsburgh, Pa.—1. If you are doing well here we would not advise you to go to England. The Ethiopian business is not as well understood nor thought as much of there as here; consequently, your salary would be small and engagements few. 2. June or July is the best time to cross the Atlantic.

JOHNNY M.—There are so many experienced in the business waiting for something to turn up that your chances would be quite limited. If you can afford to give your services to some good troupe until you have obtained a practical knowledge of what you wish to do, it is possible that an opening might be had.

W. C., Fort Garry, Manitoba.—The American House, in Boston, Mass., is located on Hanover street, and the post-office, which was burned, was on Devonshire street. The office is now located in the old South Church, at the corner of Washington and Milk streets.

CONSTANT READER, Canton.—1. We do not think you will have any difficulty in getting employment in this city to learn that trade. 2. As to the number of horses do you want—one treating of their diseases or one on training? 3. What description of hunting do you mean?

A. G. BROSS, Cincinnati, O.—We find it recorded that James E. Maddock returned from a most successful trip to England and reappeared at Burton's Theatre, on Broadway, as Young Mirabel, on Sept. 7th, 1857. It is probable that he acted in England most of his few parts.

SUBSCRIBER.—The last performances at Castle Garden of which we can find any record was in the latter part of Sept., 1854, when Mr. Hackett managed an operatic season with Grisi and Mario as the stars. Occasional performances may have been given later, but we have no record of them.

B. STRINGFELLOW, Bacilian College, Ky.—The best running jump on record is 29 feet 7 inches, made by Jack Howard, at Chester race-course, Eng. He jumped from a firm block of wood, about two feet in length, wedge shaped, and raised four inches in the front.

"SOLITAIRE."—1. We have not the space to describe "solitaire." Consult some German card-playing friend, who will teach it you in ten minutes. 2. Yes; you can "learn from a book a few steps in leg-dancing."

R. H. D., Hartford, Conn.—Theatrical managers do not take suppers to learn the art of acting. You had better abandon all thought of going upon the stage. Running away from home is the worst thing you can do.

CAPTIVE, Keokuk, Iowa.—The dramas of "Divorce!" and "Article 47," were played at Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre, have never been printed, and are the sole property of Augustin Daly, from whom only copies can be purchased.

FRANK MOORE, Washington, Pa.—Any person can dramatize a novel, copyright or not, which does not contain, in addition to the certificate of copyright, a notification that the author reserves all rights.

OLD SUBSCRIBER, Plymouth.—If the conditions of the match specified that each man should find birds for the other, then M loses the match, because he ought to have had a bird ready for C to shoot at, and the referee's first decision was right.

SEVERAL MORE HAGERSTOWNERS.—Your statement of the facts presents an entirely different phase of the matter. No person can win where the employment of fraud is clearly proven, as appears to have been done in this case.

HARRISTON.—1. Not upon record. 2. The heaviest dumb-bell ever put up, to our knowledge, weighed 165 lbs. which feat has been performed by two persons. 3. No; Goss's feat was not up to such weight, 100 lbs; Kelly's best recorded effort being 100 lbs.

W. R. SHELL, Philadelphia.—We thank you for the trouble you have taken in our behalf, but the bill of which yours is a copy is beautifully incorrect, and was published in the "Articles" of the year of May 18th, 1872.

W. F.—The Herr Karl Formes referred to is the person who sang at the Italian Opera in London, Eng., William Formes, a brother of his, was in New York for some time. The latter never sang in opera in London.

A. G. EDWARDS, Chicago.—1. The best time, etc., on record is Flora Temple's 2:19¼ record for one mile in 2:17¼, in harness. Yet. 2. The best recorded single standing jump is 15 feet 8¾ inches.

W. D. S., San Francisco, Cal.—1. B cannot with his nine sweep the board by taking up the six on the board and A's build of trays. 2. B cannot put the four on the board on his build of trays, call it seven, and take it with a seven he holds in hand.

CHAS., Louisville, Ky.—1. A has a right to put an ace out of his hand on B's build of seven, and then put them on his own build of eight, for the purpose of taking them with a eight at his next play.

C. S. C.—1. At vingt-un, if there are two naturals, and one of them the dealer's, it is a stand-off. 2. If the dealer says that he will pay 20, he is entitled to receive on 19. 3. There is only one—the New York.

BROWN, Erie, Pa.—1. The salary of a trainer and driver is a matter of arrangement between himself and his employer. 2. Jenny Lind is living in England. 3. Dan and Jim Mace are no relations. 4. Arthur Chambers.

CHAS. SUMMERS, Elmira, Ill.—A having called his build "eights," prohibited G from building on it, or taking it with any other card than an eight. He could not raise it to "tens" and then take it with the ten he held.

E. W. J., Montreal.—If you hold in hand three fives, a jack, and a five is turned up of the same suit as the jack held, you score 29; 12 for double pair royal; 16 by fifteens, and one for his nob.

J. F. S., Philadelphia, Pa.—If you will send your address to this office, the name of a person who is willing to sell a copy of "Adrienne the Actress" will be sent to you.

D. H., Seal Rapids, Ark.—The art of turning a double somersault "from the ground standing" has been often accomplished, but whether by the party named we cannot say.

DAVID O'MAHONY.—The only club likely to engage a professional is the Mutual Club, and Mr. Vinlen, printer, 101 Nassau street, N. Y., is the one to apply to.

FOXES, Syracuse.—At poker, any player can demand the right to shuffle the cards before the deal, but not after, and previous to the draw.

H. AND N., Hennepin, Ill.—A and B can decide whether they will run the cards for another trump, without the consent of C and D. The two latter players have no voice in the matter.

M., Oswego Falls, N. Y.—We cannot give you the address of the party named. A letter in care of the P. O. of Chester might reach him.

MOLIER, Lawrence, Mass.—Whenever we have intelligence of the whereabouts of the party named, you will find it in our miscellaneous summary.

BOURAS, Wyandotte, Mich.—The cards being played ace, deuce, bray and ace, the player of the second ace is entitled to a run of 3 points.

CLUSIUS, Fort Riley, Kansas.—Mr. Samuel Phelps has held a high position on the English stage for many years, and at the present time is considered a leading tragedian.

J. G. H., Detroit, Mich.—1. It is quite proper to use in conversation such words as can't, couldn't, shouldn't, etc. 2. The work on the new post office was begun, we believe, late in 1869.

JOHNNY CRUMMINGS, Phila.—1. Having made as many as 50, you win. 2. The standing army of Great Britain (regulars) is about 113,000. In 1870-71 it was 141,037.

T. W. C., Columbus, O.—Tody Pastor's Traveling Combination will go direct from New York to Poughkeepsie, where they will give their first performance.

KENNEDY, Memphis.—The greatest distance a base-ball has ever been thrown is 133 yards, 1 foot and 7½ inches, by John Hatfield, of the Mutual Club, at Brooklyn, L. I., last fall.

F. O., Olevesland, Ohio.—We do not know of any parties in this section who have tame pigeons for sale. The gun clubs around here buy them up for their own shooting.

W. L. N., Red Bank.—Charles O'Conor never accepted the nomination for president, and therefore could not be considered a candidate.

J. B. B., Paterson.—In the regular game of partner rounce, there is no such thing as one partner giving another the best deuce. You are playing some other game.

REMY, Cleveland.—1. B cannot put his deuce on an ace on the board, and then place them on A's build of seven and call it ten. 2. So cannot.

DEANE, Middletown, O.—A, having played wrong with his six-four, cannot take advantage of his own wrong-doing in his next play. He therefore loses the "horse."

H. C., Campbellford.—The person who purchased the throw of 68, which won the prize, assumed all responsibility and must pay for the drinks.

GEORGE, Dayton, O.—The signature was what we could not make out. Forward it written distinctly; and card and full instructions will be sent.

J. H. LAINE.—The telegram was not received until Saturday evening, we believe, too late for us to leave the advertisement out.

W. H. R.—1. There is a drama entitled "The New York Detective" already copyrighted. 2. When the drama was produced the author's name was not announced.

HENRY DEMAREST.—Cooper's Circus went into winter quarters at Louisville, Ky., and will give its first performance this season there on March 31st.

GEORGE HOOPER, Baltimore.—The player, having decided to allow the five to stand, cannot, on his last throw, change his mind, and throw with it again.

W. K., Vicksburg, Miss.—Having built your pile of eight, you cannot build it time with your ace; but your opponent can do so. You must take it with your eight held in hand.

FANNY.—1. Charles Wheatleigh was the original representative of Fanny Hawk. 2. Mr. Johnson, who in this city May 27th, 1861, was last engaged at Laura Keene's Theatre.

J. H., Calumet, Mich.—1. Bell's Life office is at 170 Strand, London, Eng. 2. You can get it through Wilmer & Rogers, 47 Nassau st., New York.

C. E., Sackett's Harbor, N. Y.—1. Niagara Falls are 164 feet high on the American side and 150 feet on the Canadian side. 2. Sam Patch was killed at the Genesee Falls, Rochester.

W. F., Akron, O.—There are no duties imposed on imports into the Isle of Man. 2. No government licenses are required for hotels, saloons, etc.

CHAS. M. TRUESDALE, Chicago, Ill.—At forty-fives the best card counts as soon as it is played; consequently, A goes out first. Fals refers to the "jink" game.

B. H., Chicago, Ill.—Alcock, the harpist, when we last heard from him, was in Australia. We do not know the whereabouts of the other gentlemen named.

W. G. D., Syracuse, N. Y.—The lady and her burlesque troupe performed at the Westing Opera House, Syracuse, less than one year ago, and never at any other theatre there.

RAMIS.—Apply at the office of W. E. Garrison, 5 Bowling Green, New York, who has a line running to Rio Janeiro. The next steamer leaves March 24.

J. Y.—It is the bounden duty of C, D and H to endeavor to anchor B, no matter whether it puts A out or not by their so doing.

KNOTLIN, Baltimore, Md.—The Grand Central and Theatre Comique match) be so considered.

WYANDOTTE.—Hampshire beat Harry Bassett in the Jersey Park bowling last fall. They have run five times together, Harry winning thrice.

J. H., Pen Yan.—1. Gladiateur has no officially recorded fast time, as on the English and French turf no official time is taken. 2. The fastest mile on record is 1:42¾ by Alarm.

E. HUNTSMOOR.—You do not read the CLIPPER, or you would know that Wormald, because O'Baldwin was not present at the starting place, and in the other the money was drawn. Mace having been arrested. Ned was also matched to fight Jim Mace last year, and they met in West Virginia, but failed to agree upon a referee, and the stakes were returned.

W. C., Fort Garry, Manitoba.—The American House, in Boston, Mass., is located on Hanover street, and the post-office, which was burned, was on Devonshire street. The office is now located in the old South Church, at the corner of Washington and Milk streets.

CONSTANT READER, Canton.—1. We do not think you will have any difficulty in getting employment in this city to learn that trade. 2. As to the number of horses do you want—one treating of their diseases or one on training? 3. What description of hunting do you mean?

A. G. BROSS, Cincinnati, O.—We find it recorded that James E. Maddock returned from a most successful trip to England and reappeared at Burton's Theatre, on Broadway, as Young Mirabel, on Sept. 7th, 1857. It is probable that he acted in England most of his few parts.

SUBSCRIBER.—The last performances at Castle Garden of which we can find any record was in the latter part of Sept., 1854, when Mr. Hackett managed an operatic season with Grisi and Mario as the stars. Occasional performances may have been given later, but we have no record of them.

B. STRINGFELLOW, Bacilian College, Ky.—The best running jump on record is 29 feet 7 inches, made by Jack Howard, at Chester race-course, Eng. He jumped from a firm block of wood, about two feet in length, wedge shaped, and raised four inches in the front.

"SOLITAIRE."—1. We have not the space to describe "solitaire." Consult some German card-playing friend, who will teach it you in ten minutes. 2. Yes; you can "learn from a book a few steps in leg-dancing."

R. H. D., Hartford, Conn.—Theatrical managers do not take suppers to learn the art of acting. You had better abandon all thought of going upon the stage. Running away from home is the worst thing you can do.

CAPTIVE, Keokuk, Iowa.—The dramas of "Divorce!" and "Article 47," were played at Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre, have never been printed, and are the sole property of Augustin Daly, from whom only copies can be purchased.

FRANK MOORE, Washington, Pa.—Any person can dramatize a novel, copyright or not, which does not contain, in addition to the certificate of copyright, a notification that the author reserves all rights.

OLD SUBSCRIBER, Plymouth.—If the conditions of the match specified that each man should find birds for the other, then M loses the match, because he ought to have had a bird ready for C to shoot at, and the referee's first decision was right.

SEVERAL MORE HAGERSTOWNERS.—Your statement of the facts presents an entirely different phase of the matter. No person can win where the employment of fraud is clearly proven, as appears to have been done in this case.

HARRISTON.—1. Not upon record. 2. The heaviest dumb-bell ever put up, to our knowledge, weighed 165 lbs. which feat has been performed by two persons. 3. No; Goss's feat was not up to such weight, 100 lbs; Kelly's best recorded effort being 100 lbs.

W. R. SHELL, Philadelphia.—We thank you for the trouble you have taken in our behalf, but the bill of which yours is a copy is beautifully incorrect, and was published in the "Articles" of the year of May 18th, 1872.

W. F.—The Herr Karl Formes referred to is the person who sang at the Italian Opera in London, Eng. William Formes, a brother of his, was in New York for some time. The latter never sang in opera in London.

A. G. EDWARDS, Chicago.—1. The best time, etc., on record is Flora Temple's 2:19¼ record for one mile in 2:17¼, in harness. Yet. 2. The best recorded single standing jump is 15 feet 8¾ inches.

W. D. S., San Francisco, Cal.—1. B cannot with his nine sweep the board by taking up the six on the board and A's build of trays. 2. B cannot put the four on the board on his build of trays, call it seven, and take it with a seven he holds in hand.

CHAS., Louisville, Ky.—1. A has a right to put an ace out of his hand on B's build of seven, and then put them on his own build of eight, for the purpose of taking them with a eight at his next play.

C. S. C.—1. At vingt-un, if there are two naturals, and one of them the dealer's, it is a stand-off. 2. If the dealer says that he will pay 20, he is entitled to receive on 19. 3. There is only one—the New York.

BROWN, Erie, Pa.—1. The salary of a trainer and driver is a matter of arrangement between himself and his employer. 2. Jenny Lind is living in England. 3. Dan and Jim Mace are no relations. 4. Arthur Chambers.

CHAS. SUMMERS, Elmira, Ill.—A having called his build "eights," prohibited G from building on it, or taking it with any other card than an eight. He could not raise it to "tens" and then take it with the ten he held.

E. W. J., Montreal.—If you hold in hand three fives, a jack, and a five is turned up of the same suit as the jack held, you score 29; 12 for double pair royal; 16 by fifteens, and one for his nob.

J. F. S., Philadelphia, Pa.—If you will send your address to this office, the name of a person who is willing to sell a copy of "Adrienne the Actress" will be sent to you.

D. H., Seal Rapids, Ark.—The art of turning a double somersault "from the ground standing" has been often accomplished, but whether by the party named we cannot say.

DAVID O'MAHONY.—The only club likely to engage a professional is the Mutual Club, and Mr. Vinlen, printer, 101 Nassau street, N. Y., is the one to apply to.

FOXES, Syracuse.—At poker, any player can demand the right to shuffle the cards before the deal, but not after, and previous to the draw.

H. AND N., Hennepin, Ill.—A and B can decide whether they will run the cards for another trump, without the consent of C and D. The two latter players have no voice in the matter.

M., Oswego Falls, N. Y.—We cannot give you the address of the party named. A letter in care of the P. O. of Chester might reach him.

MOLIER, Lawrence, Mass.—Whenever we have intelligence of the whereabouts of the party named, you will find it in our miscellaneous summary.

BOURAS, Wyandotte, Mich.—The cards being played ace, deuce, bray and ace, the player of the second ace is entitled to a run of 3 points.

CLUSIUS, Fort Riley, Kansas.—Mr. Samuel Phelps has held a high position on the English stage for many years, and at the present time is considered a leading tragedian.

J. G. H., Detroit, Mich.—1. It is quite proper to use in conversation such words as can't, couldn't, shouldn't, etc. 2. The work on the new post office was begun, we believe, late in 1869.

JOHNNY CRUMMINGS, Phila.—1. Having made as many as 50, you win. 2. The standing army of Great Britain (regulars) is about 113,000. In 1870-71 it was 141,037.

T. W. C., Columbus, O.—Tody Pastor's Traveling Combination will go direct from New York to Poughkeepsie, where they will give their first performance.

KENNEDY, Memphis.—The greatest distance a base-ball has ever been thrown is 133 yards, 1 foot and 7½ inches, by John Hatfield, of the Mutual Club, at Brooklyn, L. I., last fall.

F. O., Olevesland, Ohio.—We do not know of any parties in this section who have tame pigeons for sale. The gun clubs around here buy them up for their own shooting.

W. L. N., Red Bank.—Charles O'Conor never accepted the nomination for president, and therefore could not be considered a candidate.

J. B. B., Paterson.—In the regular game of partner rounce, there is no such thing as one partner giving another the best deuce. You are playing some other game.

REMY, Cleveland.—1. B cannot put his deuce on an ace on the board, and then place them on A's build of seven and call it ten. 2. So cannot.

DEANE, Middletown, O.—A, having played wrong with his six-four, cannot take advantage of his own wrong-doing in his next play. He therefore loses the "horse."

H. C., Campbellford.—The person who purchased the throw of 68, which won the prize, assumed all responsibility and must pay for the drinks.

GEORGE, Dayton, O.—The signature was what we could not make out. Forward it written distinctly; and card and full instructions will be sent.

J. H. LAINE.—The telegram was not received until Saturday evening, we believe, too late for us to leave the advertisement out.

W. H. R.—1. There is a drama entitled "The New York Detective" already copyrighted. 2. When the drama was produced the author's name was not announced.

HENRY DEMAREST.—Cooper's Circus went into winter quarters at Louisville, Ky., and will give its first performance this season there on March 31st.

GEORGE HOOPER, Baltimore.—The player, having decided to allow the five to stand, cannot, on his last throw, change his mind, and throw with it again.

W. K., Vicksburg, Miss.—Having built your pile of eight, you cannot build it time with your ace; but your opponent can do so. You must take it with your eight held in hand.

FANNY.—1. Charles Wheatleigh was the original representative of Fanny Hawk. 2. Mr. Johnson, who in this city May 27th, 1861, was last engaged at Laura Keene's Theatre.

J. H., Calumet, Mich.—1. Bell's Life office is at 170 Strand, London, Eng. 2. You can get it through Wilmer & Rogers, 47 Nassau st., New York.

C. E., Sackett's Harbor, N. Y.—1. Niagara Falls are 164 feet high on the American side and 150 feet on the Canadian side. 2. Sam Patch was killed at the Genesee Falls, Rochester.

W. F., Akron, O.—There are no duties imposed on imports into the Isle of Man. 2. No government licenses are required for hotels, saloons, etc.

CHAS. M. TRUESDALE, Chicago, Ill.—At forty-fives the best card counts as soon as it is played; consequently, A goes out first. Fals refers to the "jink" game.

B. H., Chicago, Ill.—Alcock, the harpist, when we last heard from him, was in Australia. We do not know the whereabouts of the other gentlemen named.

W. G. D., Syracuse, N. Y.—The lady and her burlesque troupe performed at the Westing Opera House, Syracuse, less than one year ago, and never at any other theatre there.

RAMIS.—Apply at the office of W. E. Garrison, 5 Bowling Green, New York, who has a line running to Rio Janeiro. The next steamer leaves March 24.

J. Y.—It is the bounden duty of C, D and H to endeavor to anchor B, no matter whether it puts A out or not by their so doing.

KNOTLIN, Baltimore, Md.—The Grand Central and Theatre Comique match) be so considered.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

 Your prisoners escaped from the county jail at Auburn, N. Y., on the evening of the 15th, by knocking down the jailer, whom they severely injured. They are Albert R. Perry, ex-convict, horse-thief and burglar; Garrison Hasbrouck, ex-convict and sneak thief; Sylvester Price (colored), burglar, and Abraham Benson, stage-driver, who stole funds entrusted to him as a carrier.

 At Franklin Pa., on March 14, Thomas F. Anderson, after setting fire to Leasherton's Bank, of which he was cashier, removed to the presence of his wife and blew out his brains. His object in firing the bank was to hide his own irregularities by destroying sundry special deposits and bills receivable, $30,000 of which belong to Mr. Lamberton.

 A fire in Kansas City on the 15th inst. ruined from $25,000 to $30,000 worth of stamps in the U. S. Internal Revenue office. The vault of the Kansas Savings Bank, in the same building, had been entered, and $7,000 abstracted. The vault had been unlocked, not broken open, and startling revelations are expected.

 Baltimore is on the rampage in which the leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was by the Conference Committee unanimously found guilty of gross immorality and conduct unbecoming a minister of the gospel, and formally expelled from the church.

 The physicians appointed by Judge Brady to examine Bleakley, the murderer of Maud Merrill, and who repelled his counsel's suggestion that he was not in his right mind, have reported; and they have come to the conclusion as to the cards are played out.

 The fire at Rolling Fork, Miss., seems to have been the work of incendiarism to hide larceny, there having been found the charred remains of the two Moore and Mrs. Moore, Mr. Goodhue and a child named Billy Jones. In two of the cases an axe had evidently been the instrument of death.

 On the 13th inst. Philadelphia police made a descent upon a tavern at Fifteenth and Callowhill streets, where they found a ring formed for a prize-fight. Three of the parties were captured—Jamie Smith, William White and John Richardson. Held in $400 each.

 In the township of Worth, near Chicago, on the 14th, a house occupied by John Simmons, a farmer, was burned, and Simmons' father, aged eighty, and his child, aged two years, perished in the flames. A thousand dollars in banknotes, secreted in a crevice in a wall of the house, were consumed.

 Todd's Scouring mills, at La Salle, Ill., owned by Maurice Bernstadt, were burned on the 14th. The loss is $23,510; insurance, $7,500. Todd & Son, in addition, lost 1,500 bushels of wheat; uninsured.

 It is telegraphed from New Orleans that S. C. Hancock, M. F. Howell correspondent and ex-editor of the New Orleans Times, was on the 15th inst. terribly beaten by some friends of Mrs. W. H. King, proprietor of the "revived" Times.

 Tried for manslaughter in the fourth degree, for having run over and caused the death of a boy, Mathew Stapleton, a driver on one of Dodd's express wagons, was acquitted on the 12th in the Brooklyn Court of Sessions.

 At Comack, Mich., on the 11th inst., a kerosene lamp exploded and set fire to the home of Mr. O. Smith, whose sight was destroyed in his endeavors to save his wife, who was fatally burned. Their two children perished in the flames.

 At Boston, on the 13th, William Patterson, an English thief of several aliases, on an indictment for burglary, and Charles Johnson, of Baltimore, on six indictments for larceny, were sentenced to the State prison.

 On the morning of the 12th inst., a Pullman's palace-car on the Chicago and Lake Michigan Railroad was consumed. The car was full of passengers, who escaped with their lives, losing their baggage and clothing. Loss, $30,000.

 By the caving-in of a high bank on the 10th inst., on the line of the Stoney Creek Railroad, now being built, John or Jas. Hinds was instantly killed and Pat Kelly seriously injured, near Norristown, Pa.

 Under the names of Harrison Brown and Henry Williams, the parties arrested on suspicion of connivance to rob the Corn Exchange Bank have been held at Philadelphia in default of $4,000.

 Gov. Dix on the 14th inst. rendered his decision in the case of William Foster, the carbook murderer. He declines to commute the sentence of death, and consequently Foster, for life, and Foster will accordingly be hung on Friday, March 21st.

 Osborne, hung at Galesburg, Ill., last Friday, for the murder of Mrs. Matthews, previous to which he made the insane statement that he was called to commit the deed, the peculiar circumstances of which render it uncommonly appalling.

 The Supreme Court of Commonwealth of Massachusetts rendered on the 13th March a decision against the Commonwealth of Boston from issuing bonds loaning the city's credit for the purpose of rebuilding in the burnt district.

 The wife of Ossian E. Dodge confesses that the allegations of adultery brought against him, and sworn to by her, were totally false, having been made in pursuance of a conspiracy entered into between herself and her lawyer.

 Atwood Davenport, in recognition of a hackman's demand for fare, pointed a pistol at the head and threatened to shoot. This method of payment is not customary even in New York; and Atwood was on the 14th held by Judge Hogan in $1,000.

 Mott street, N. York.

 The widow of Jacob Hoffman, one of the men injured by the backing down of a car on the New Jersey Railroad in Jersey City on the 14th of December last, has begun an action to recover $30,000 from the company.

 George Driver, who shot and killed his wife, who had procured a divorce from him, was hung at Chicago on the 14th. His last words "advised all to shun liquor as poison that injured the body and the mind."

 Barrett & Wheatley's pork-house at Spring Valley, O., which contained about 7,000 pieces, and 200 tierces of lard, was destroyed by fire March 13. No estimate of loss; insured for $35,000.

 A cable telegram says that the Hon. Mr. Gladstone has intimated his desire for a temporary retirement from office, so that it is not probable he will resume the premiership—for the present, at least.

 The first meeting of the creditors of Bowles Brothers & Co. was held at Boston, Mass., on the 17th, before the receiver in bankruptcy. The present creditors represented about $150,000. Henry J. Stevens, of Boston, was elected assignee.

 The trial of Martines for the murder of Mary S. Gibson was begun in San Francisco on the 12th.

 James McIntyre, injured two weeks ago by the accidental discharge of a gun at the Bowery Theatre, died on the 15th inst.

 A fire occurred at Cincinnati on the 14th inst., damaging the extent of $10,000.

 The brick building 282 Broadway, owned by the Lorillard estate, was destroyed by fire on the 15th inst.

 The planing mill of Smurker & Co., St. Louis, was burned on the 12th. Loss, $30,000.

 A part of the business portion of Tuscola, Ill., was destroyed by fire March 13th. Loss, $40,000.

 Two houses were burned in Ashland, Pa., on the 13th, four persons being injured by falling chimneys.

 At New Albany, Ind., on the 13th, a switch-engine backing out of the yards ran over and killed a woman and a group of children.

 A fire at Cincinnati on the 14th inst. damaged the furniture manufactory of H. C. Stewart & Co. to the extent of $10,000.

 Three children were drowned at Orono, Me., March 13th, by breaking through the ice while at play.

 Several business houses at Savannah Court House were burned on the 13th. Loss not reported.

 Thos. Lyle, in Salt Lake, March 10, Jones, for some years postmaster of this city, tendered his resignation as such.

 The Susquehannah river is rising slowly, and has already destroyed both life and property.

SQUIBS AND THINGS.

—Thus an exchange: "A compositor of Dubuque has successfully set his caps for a southern heiress with $30,000 in her own right." The paper says nothing about the lady's ability to set type. It is simply impossible for a compositor ever to have any such luck. Providence has ordained that his greatest luxury shall be a half dollar in pocket and the privilege of "putting on a sub." Now, if he should marry an heiress, he wouldn't attend to it; there would be a "sub on" in that family before the week closed.

—Philo S. Smith died in Lockport, Jan. 30, aged 76 years; Isaac Smith died at South Lyons Feb. 1, aged 80 years, and Alba F. Smith died in Bay City, Mich., Feb. 4, aged 77 years. These were three brothers. Isaac started from Brighton, Mich., to attend the funeral of Philo and was killed by a railroad accident. Alba died from the shock received from the news of his double bereavement.

—The Hon. Fernando Wood, who is an attentive reader of the CLIPPER, favored a special editorial suggestion for a periodical hanging-lay. Interviewed by the Graphic, the great congressman thus brought down his fist: "If we had a regular hanging-day Monday morning, it would keep the community straight for the rest of the week."

—At a meeting of the Philadelphia Historical Society, March 10th, W. Isaac Norris made a formal presentation of Penn manuscripts, consisting of original letters, documents, manuscripts, grants, papers and rare books and pamphlets with reference to the early history of Pennsylvania and incidentally to other parts of America.

—Having some time ago deeded thirteen acres of land in Baltimore for the erection of a hospital for the relief of indigent sick and orphans, J. S. Hopkins, the well-known millionaire, of that city, has made the further dedication of $3,000,000 worth of property for the same purpose.

—Imminent the "lockout" that never yet has paid. Labor 'gainst Capital being once more arrayed. The cry of the bosses, who think they hold bowers, is "No extra pay, and a return to ten hours;" while trades-union people, as though no cloud low ers, ask "Fifty cents extra for a daily eight hours?"

—Maryland is in luck. George W. Hall, who shot and killed Miss Shockley, committed suicide by throwing himself under a freight train. Col. Riddle, with a company of cavalry, came upon and captured thirty-five of the Modoc Indians last Saturday. Since then Capt. Jack wants to talk with the commissioners.

—Wm. M. Roberts, of the Fifth Congressional District, N. Y. city, has renounced his back pay as congressman.

—Gladstone was burned in effigy on the 12th by the students of Trinity College, Dublin.

—The bride of Mr. Martines for the murder of Mary S. Gibson was born in San Francisco on the 12th.

—James McIntyre, injured two weeks ago by the accidental discharge of a gun at the Bowery Theatre, died on the 15th inst.

—The brick building 282 Broadway, owned by the Lorillard estate, was destroyed by fire on the 15th inst.

—The planing mill of Smurker & Co., St. Louis, was burned on the 12th. Loss, $30,000.

—A part of the business portion of Tuscola, Ill., was destroyed by fire March 13th. Loss, $40,000.

—Two houses were burned in Ashland, Pa., on the 13th, four persons being injured by falling chimneys.

—At New Albany, Ind., on the 13th, a switch-engine backing out of the yards ran over and killed a woman and a group of children.

—A fire at Cincinnati on the 14th inst. damaged the furniture manufactory of H. C. Stewart & Co. to the extent of $10,000.

—Three children were drowned at Orono, Me., March 13th, by breaking through the ice while at play.

—Several business houses at Savannah Court House were burned on the 13th. Loss not reported.

—Thos. Lyle, in Salt Lake, March 10, Jones, for some years postmaster of this city, tendered his resignation as such.

—The Susquehannah river is rising slowly, and has already destroyed both life and property.

—A fire at Jeffersonville on Sunday morning last did damage to the amount of $25,000; insurance, $18,000.

—A tornado destroyed Lentz, Bowman & Co.'s "breaker" at Mahanoy City Pa., on the night of the 13th.

—Peter Wessler, brakeman, was killed at Binghamton, while uncoupling cars, on the 18th.

AQUATICS.

JOHN BUBLIN WILL ROW GEORGE BROWN ON ANY ONE Row.—We were waited upon by Assemblyman Barney Biglin on the morning of the 17th inst., who desires us to say that he is prepared to match his brother John against George Brown, the champion, of Canada, to row a race of five or six miles, for $1,000 a side; the race to take place at Springfield, Mass., before the Penn Boston rows shifter (if matched), and on or about the date which may be set apart as the annual boat regatta, as the Biglins consider Springfield for the reason that the course is said to be almost equal from the cities in which he and Brown reside. Being engaged to train the Dartmouth College crew for the regatta, he will not be able to row the race before the date mentioned. If acceptable to the Hatiganian, Biglin will at once forward articles of agreement to the address he may give in his letter of acceptance, which can be sent to the office. If Brown backs out after articles are made and a match, then John can be backed against Ellis Ward, or any other person laying claim to the championship of America, on the same conditions. This is a big offer, and if Brown should decline, there are several others who ought to talk business with the New Rochey, and we fancy one or other of them will. Let Brown be prompt with his reply, be it favorable or otherwise, so that, in case of his declension, others may have a chance in get their ear in.

CLASPER MEMORIAL.—A meeting of the committee having charge of the memorial to the late Harry Clasper, the once famous Tyneside oarsman, was recently held at E. Winship's, Newcastle, Eng., when it was announced that the amount in hand was £115 18s., but there were two or three lists yet to come in, and it was anticipated that the total amount would reach £130. The design of G. Burn, of Newcastle, the sculptor of the Chambers and Renforth monuments, was unanimously selected. The memorial will be in decorated Gothic, 18ft. in height by 6ft. and 5ft. at the base. The design is for a base of blocks of Fredham stone, with pillars supporting a pinnacled canopy, beneath which is placed a life-size statue of Harry Clasper. The statue Mr. Burn promised to present to the committee as his contribution to the fund. The base will also be ornamented with a monument and place it in Whickham churchyard for the sum of £30. The surplus will, after the memorial is erected, be handed over to Clasper's widow.

THE SCULLING MATCH between George B. Englehart, of Greenpoint, L. I., champion amateur, and Thomas Pearon, of Yonkers, N. Y., has been definitely arranged. They are to row a straightaway three-mile race, with the tide, at Pleasant Valley, during the first week in May, Pearon being allowed a start of three lengths. Englehart replies to the challenge from Ed. Blake, stating his readiness to make a match and appointing a meeting with Blake at Jack Eckerson's Regatta House, foot of Christopher street, N. R., on Tuesday, March 18th, at 8 o'clock P. M., to arrange preliminaries.

GEORGIA REGATTA ASSOCIATION.—The commodore of this association, the Hon. John Screven, has selected the following officers for the season of 1873: Executive committee—F. M. Hall, ex-officio chairman; Louis G. Young, R. A. Bolt, Dr. J. T. McFarland, C. A. Withers, J. G. Haskell. Patrol judges—W. Barnwell, Thos. F. Screven, Timers—Wm. Noyle Habersham, Octavus Cohen, C. M. Cunningham. Measurer—Philip Hartley. Sailing committee—Julian Myers, Martin Tuffts, J. S. Claghorn, S. F. Goodwyn, P. Hartley. Secretary pro tem.—R. D. Bolt.

NEW BOATS FOR CHARLESTON.—The steamship Champion, on her last trip to Charleston, took out two new sheils, both built by Elliott. One of these is 27 ft. long, 13 in. deep, cost $125, and is designed for the Ashley River Boat Club, whose crack oarsmen are Messrs. Simse, Holmes, Walker and Whaley. The other is for the Ashley River Club, with the purpose that it shall be the first prize in the forthcoming contests of the association. She is 41 feet long, about 10 in. wide, has improved gliding seats neatly carpeted, and cost $300.

MINIATURE YACHTING.—The Long Island Model Yacht Club has been chartered by the Legislature, and they will open the season in April with a display of model miniature yachts in Prospect Park Lake, valued at from three to five thousand dollars. Captains Dayton, Stevenson, Cole, Marsters and others have built some very beautiful boats this winter for the spring regattas on the lake. The Manhattan Miniature Yacht Club, too, are to have a fleet of model yachts at Central Park this summer.

DOUBLE SCULL RACE.—"Our colored brethren" down at Thunderbolt, near Savannah, Ga., on March 8th, gave an exhibition of their "staying powers" in a double-scull race, for a small purse, over a two-mile course—one mile down the river to a stake-boat and return. Three boats were entered, but only two started, the victory falling to representatives of the name of Brown. They were not related. Mr. C. O. Lamotte was starter. Time not given.

THE CAMBRIDGE CREW are the favorites for the forthcoming eight-oared race on the Thames, the odds on March 1st being 6 to 4. The "light blue" oarsmen were to take up their quarters at Putney on the 10th inst., in which event they would have the advantage of considerably longer practice on the course than their opponents, who, it was stated, would not be able to leave Oxford until a week or ten days later.

ST. JOHN ROWING CLUB.—The annual meeting of this New Orleans club was held on March 5th, when the following officers were elected for one year: President, R. R. Musgrove; vice president, L. W. Fairbanks; treasurer, James F. Koch; secretary, Taylor Dessars; captain, T. E. Richardson; trustees—J. A. Fennimore, Geo. H. Dunbar and J. Glynn, Jr. The first Thursday in May was fixed upon as the opening day.

BILLY SCHARFF'S stock is "away up" at Pittsburgh, where he has a number of solid men at his back, who are willing to put up big stake on him, as it is likely that if everything will be made for a match between him and anybody that rows on our waters this season. Whoever can beat him, and will do it, can carry away stacks of green paper.

THERE SEEMS some prospect of a race being arranged between George Brown, of Halifax, N. S., and Joe Sadler, champion of England, the former of whom issued a challenge some time ago. It is said that an answer has been received from Sadler, who is willing to make the proposed match, but prefers to row at Saratoga, N. Y.

THE FARRAGUT BOAT CLUB, of Vallejo, Cal., received a new four-oared shell, which they have christened the George L. Meade. It was constructed by George Roshr, of this city, is 40 feet long, 20 inches wide and weighs, outriggers and all, 134 pounds. It is fitted with sliding seats, also.

ARTICLES for the sculling match between Joe Sadler and Bob Barnall, for the championship of England, were forwarded to Newcastle on the 28th ult. The terms contained therein are those proposed by Bagnall in his ultimatum.

THEATRICAL RECORD.

Keith, the English clown, and the Wells Family, equestrians, are favorites .....A grand carnival was celebrated at Hamburg, Germany, on the 23d ult., and the week was one of festivity. Its success was, 'tis said, mainly due to J. W. Myers, circus-manager, who placed the whole of his resources at the disposal of the authorities. The circus was well filled nightly.

Miscellaneous.

CATASTROPHE AT SMYRNA.—In the Levant Times, of the 13th ult., we find the following: "Our correspondent at Smyrna, in a letter received by the Egyptian steamer arrived this morning, states that the number of persons who were present at the acrobatic performance in the Café Kivoto on Sunday night, when the catastrophe occurred, was more than 250. For a long time past the proprietor of the café had been warned of the insecurity of the structure, and that he ought to pull it down and rebuild it. Even just before the fatal occurrence the engineers in question examined to him the imminent possibility of its breaking down with so large an audience as was expected, and of the appalling consequences which would ensue. The obstinate and selfish fellow paid no heed to these remonstrances, and only occupied himself the more eagerly with selling tickets. The performance had scarcely commenced when the rickety shanty began to creak and shake, the windows broke, and the guidepost had scarcely time to rise from their seats in the terror which ensued, when the miserable structure tumbled bodily into the sea, overwhelming the unfortunate people, whose heartrending cries were addressed only to God, 'there being,' as no help was nigh.' The authorities were soon on the spot, and divers were set to work to drag out the bodies of those who had perished—more than half the number present. Upwards of seventy had been recovered up to Monday. The medical men and clergy emulated each other in efforts to resuscitate those who were not past the hope of saving. The victims, as nearly all the audience, belonged to the lower class of Greeks. In consequence of this terrible calamity the first ball of the season, which was to have taken place at the European Casino, was postponed."

Recently, the aëronautic trapeze performer, narrowly escaped a horrible death during the viceregal marriage feasts at Cairo, Egypt. His balloon became torn when about four hundred yards from the earth, and the wind, entering the rent, turned the vessel inside out. Bended back on the trapeze bar until within twenty yards of the earth, and then falling upon the soft ground, was only stunned and bruised slightly.

IMMENSE AND CONTINUED success of the New Sensational Illusion, "THE FRANKENSTEIN MYSTERY," invented by T. W. TOBIN, Esq. NOTICE.—This extraordinary effect has been daily protected by law. Played to crowded houses at Philadelphia and Boston.
"One of the most striking and mysterious feats ever attempted. The weird illusion is drawing very large and interesting assemblages at the American Theatre."—Philadelphia Age.
"An extraordinary sensation."—Evening Herald. "Professor Tobin's great illusion of 'Frankenstein' has been witnessed with wonder and admiration by immense audiences. This is certainly one of the most curious and remarkable affairs of this kind that has ever been attempted in this city."—Boston Herald. "The Boston public have hitherto been permitted to witness many good optical illusions, but never one, we fancy, better than that now at the Howard, entitled the 'Frankenstein Mystery.' * * * And if any one detected the method by which it was done, he must have had the eyes of Argus. The performance is inexplicable."—Evening Traveler. "The intermezzo brought the long looked for 'Frankenstein Mystery.' This certainly is the most wonderful and interesting piece of illusion that has ever been brought forward for many a day. It is enough to say that it was excellently well performed, and was received with loud applause."—Evening Traveler. "One of the most successful stage illusions ever presented."—Times. "The Howard Athenæum was crowded to repletion every night of the past week. * * * The chief attraction, the 'Frankenstein Mystery,' is a very clever illusion."—Evening Gazette. "The great 'Frankenstein Mystery' is a mystery indeed, and one which is as amusing as it is inexplicable."—Evening Traveler. * * * "Created profound astonishment. It is a remarkably clever illusion."—Globe. "But the 'Frankenstein Mystery' appeared to be the leading sensation. * * * Wonders are not likely to cease, even if the age is very keen."—Evening Express. "The Howard Athenæum was packed to its full capacity last evening, the great attraction being the 'Frankenstein' illusion."—Transcript. 51-1t*

THE CHAPMAN SISTERS IN CALIFORNIA.
The Chapman Sisters have made an immense hit at the Metropolitan Theatre. The audience last night was even more numerous than on the first night, and the performance was more spirited. Miss Blanche Chapman was as well on the first night that she feared she would be unable to appear, but nevertheless acquitted herself so well that none were aware of the fact. This lady is certainly the best vocalist of all who have appeared in burlesque in this city. Miss Ida is the pet of the public.—Chronicle.
METROPOLITAN THEATRE.—Byron's burlesque of "Little Don Giovanni," presented at this house last evening, served to introduce two new candidates for popular favor. The Chapman sisters, Blanche and Ella, happily formed the "Violets of the Stage," were the candidates, and they at once established themselves in the good opinion of the audience. Blanche is full and slim, but beautifully formed, and possesses no incomparable share of those personal charms so essential in burlesque. Her manner is easy, graceful and always pleasing, and her knowledge of stage business is quickly turned to good account whenever an opportunity is afforded. There is no undue effort made to render herself conspicuous, any further than her assumed character necessitates, but when it does, it is not with that too common boldness of burlesque performers generally, which cannot but offend a refined audience. She sang several difficult airs very acceptably. But Emma is destined to become prime favorite, and last evening her performance was loudly applauded, and deservedly so. Small in stature, she is sprightly, frolicsome, brimming over with jollity, and dances, sings, and thrums the banjo, jokes with supreme audacity, delights the boys in gallery, and pleases all. The burlesque

"IN MEMORIAM."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Farewell, old friend! as firm and true, thou early pass'd away,
How many hearts are mourning from your absence, Nat, to-day!
When last I held that trembling hand, the day before you died,
I little thought that you so soon would 'neath the clay abide.

Full well you knew the time had come to bid a last "good-bye,"
For no encouragement could hide the thought that you must die;
And as adown each pallid cheek the tear-drops slowly roll'd,
You murmured the last act was on, the final story told.

Farewell, O true and trusted friend! we'll miss your actions kind,
For many deeds of manliness were brought by your mind:
With cheering words for ev'ry one you had the best esteem,
And your departure tells me that this life is but a dream.

ANDY MCKEE.

RAILROAD ADVENTURES OF A FEMME SEULE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Not long since I traveled alone from Philadelphia to Chicago, by way of the Pennsylvania Central and the Pittsburgh and Fort Wayne Railroads; and, with a view to the full enjoyment of the journey, I remained over night at Altoona and Crestline.

"Don't you speak to a single man till you get there," was the farewell injunction of a maiden aunt.

"But, auntie, men don't go labeled. How shall I know whether they are single or not?"

"Don't you speak to nary man," she said, with asperity.

"Don't get your pocket picked!" called the shrill voice of my grandmother as the cars commenced to move slowly out of the depot, and, as I made no response, she waved her umbrella in reiteration of the caution. Everybody gazed at me with that delightful and eminently polite air of endeavoring to avoid laughter.

"No, no," grandma, I called; "I won't get it picked!"

"Dear me," I thought, "one would suppose people procured their pockets picked;" but at all events I complied literally with both injunctions till I reached Altoona, where I spent the night.

The next morning I was in a downright splendid frame of mind and quite solus, not speaking to anyone but the waiters; and I am certain I had as much amusement at breakfast as anyone who ever sat at that table. I took a few notes on society, and, among other things, observed an exquisitely corpulent old gentleman accompanied by a very fine-looking man, the latter about thirty years of age.

Ladies have eyes as well as men, and they enjoy using them, too, but I soon discovered it prudent to forego the use of mine in the direction of that pair, and banished them from my thoughts; and, when the train arrived, I entered a car, and commenced a search for a seat. The other Altoona passengers were wandering around in the same pursuit, with an excellent prospect of not finding any. Finally, after roaming through several cars, I spied a vacancy, or rather a sort of a narrow fissure between the outside arm of a seat and the three-hundred-pound old gentleman I had seen at breakfast.

"It belongs to the other gentleman," I thought, "but n'importe—I must sit somewhere."

I have a good eye for dimensions, and thereupon I commenced considering the feasibility of wedging myself into this cleft. I call it a cleft, because it was not only narrow, but deep. I am not at all fastidious, nor have I any antipathy to sitting cornerwise, nor to having my arms pinioned like a trussed fowl; but I had "stopped over" for the express purpose of seeing the magnificent Horseshoe Bend and the mountain scenery, all of which the obese old gentleman totally eclipsed, without making the least effort to grow small or to offer me the side next the window. At that moment a pleasant voice said,

"Here is a seat, Miss," and, turning, I beheld the old gentleman's companion. I thanked him, and took the seat by the window, only wondering where that seat was when I passed. "That gentleman is welcome to sit by that horrid monster," I said, as I made myself comfortable.

Soon an umbrella was placed in the rack above my head, then a valise; then I could see some one removing an overcoat, and that went into the rack, too, and then a hat; but all the time I was looking out of the window, and then the performer of these arrangements took the vacant seat at my side, family fashion.

"That old gentleman is my traveling companion," said the same voice that had offered me the seat. "He has the gout, and, besides, he can't abide young ladies. I'm not similarly afflicted, so I kept his seat for you."

"You are very kind—thanks," said I; "and you are fortunate in not having the gout."

"The gout! Ha! ha! ha! It is the aversion to young ladies that does not afflict me."

"Oh, is that what you mean?" said I, still viewing the scene before me, and resolved not to speak again; but a conversation thus begun is not so easily terminated, especially when people are ascending the mountain and are filled with delight and overflowing with admiration. Besides this, I had not "spoken a word" since 11 A. M. the preceding day, and I was suffering to talk.

"How no friend to set thy mind abroach?
Good sense will stagnate. Thoughts shut up want air,
And spoil, like bales unopened to the sun."

So says the author of "Night Thoughts." My mind was "set abroach," and then my thoughts. Of course we converse chiefly upon the scene. Nevertheless, it came to pass that in the course of a couple of hours my companion had furnished me with a very interesting autobiographical sketch, the main point whereof was his having been one of those noble souls who fought the recent battles of this glorious republic.

"Where would I be now," thought I, "had it not been for these patriots? A slave in odious bondage, no doubt."

He had been wounded at Gettysburg too, poor soul, and I resolved to repulse him no more. I chatted as if I had known him all my life. He was very entertaining, and talked of celebrated generals, battles, and so forth. It was only when he indulged in occasional personalities that I felt any qualms of conscience, but then the ready Sign of Asmena turns quite another thing. We had a few minutes at Pittsburgh, which, à propos of Gettysburg, taking a view of the surroundings, said:

"We are near a long tunnel—a very long tunnel," and he laughed a little, sly laugh.

Everybody knows how many funny stories are told about tunnels, but I maintained a comparatively dignified countenance as I replied:

"I hate tunnels."

"Hate tunnels? I don't," said Gettysburg.

"But they are dangerous."

"Dangerous! Oh, no; I never knew of anything disagreeable to happen in a tunnel."

"That's from your stand; eint. I hope they'll light the lamp," said, looking around for the conductor, quite distressed, for certainly my companion's remarks were not reassuring.

"What's the matter?" said he, gleefully, observing my anxiety.

"Nothing, only I don't want to be killed; anybody might come and kill us in the dark."

"Oh, I'll take care of you."

"But the train might run off the track." At that moment the conductor entered. "Now he'll light the lamp!" I exclaimed.

"If he does I'll levigate him!" exclaimed Gettysburg; but the man lighted a candle directly over my head, unmolested.

"Splendid!" said I, triumphantly.

"Atrocious! I intended to steal your glove."

Now, there had already been several allusions to that glove; so, to end the controversy, I put both out of sight in my muff, along with the hands in them, just as the train clattered into the dark tunnel—so dark from the sudden entrance that I was, for a moment, unable to distinguish anything.

"Only one flickering light," said Gettysburg. "For my part I can't see a blink, and don't believe anyone else can."

"O, my gracious! everybody can see!" said I, startled at the threatening aspect of affairs.

"I wish they were blind! Furies take this contemptible tallow, to rob a man this way."

"Not altogether the fault of the candle." My mind was quite happy, for we had emerged into daylight again.

"It was the candle, I protest it was!"

Fearful conversation! "We'll soon reach the battle-ground of Fort Du Quesne," said I, with a view to changing the subject. "I don't believe you ever heard of it."

I had discovered him to be slightly pedantic, and next best to stealing gloves he appeared to enjoy parading his knowledge. So, accepting the challenge, he told all he knew of Braddock's defeat, and thus matters were pretty comfortable till we reached the outskirts of smoky Pittsburgh, and the personal attributes were consumed. I was looking up at the little cottages perched so oddly upon the summits of the heights near the city, when lo! the dogmatic time Gettysburg said:

"Do let me have your address. If you don't, I shall drown myself in the Monongahela."

Casting a glance at him over my shoulder, I said, "See these cottages. How's that for high?"

The man gazed at me in blank amazement, while I coolly looked out of the window, with a fifty-dollar laugh in my sleeve.

"I didn't imagine you would say such a thing!" he finally gasped.

"Oh, don't piece me out with your imagination," I replied. It is said that wild beasts sometimes turn and fly, if the object of pursuit rushes fearlessly towards them. Whether this be true or not, I know that an excellent way to treat genus homo is to be shocking. This rebuff lasted till we disembarked at Pittsburgh for dinner, when the following dreadful quarrel ensued.

"Then you won't give me your card?"

"Not for a chateau."

"But I know your name. It's a fact. I accidentally saw it on your handkerchief."

"Dastardly treeboater! unlearn the knowledge."

"Never! I shall see you again. I'm resolved to ring every door-bell in Chicago till I find you, or, like Thomas a'Becket's mother, I'll rush frantically up and down the streets, calling your name, till I meet some one who knows you."

Thus we parted. After partaking of an alleged dollar's worth of provisions at the railroad hotel, I pursued my journey as far as Crestline, purchasing blissful solitude in the parlor-car. Gettysburg was forgotten till I reached Crestline, where, in my room at the "Continental" (how I laughed at the name!),

"I summ'd the actions of the day that night before I slept."

"Such actions, too. What would aunt say? How dared that man talk so about gloves? If he hadn't been wounded—aye, there's the rub! Now, to-morrow I shall not speak to anyone. I shall read all day. Wonder if I shall ever see that Gettysburg again. Hope not. Tormenting me so!"

I then retired to rest, but "coming events cast their shadows before." A dark shadow stole over my soul. Springing up, I again attended to all three of the doors with which my room was generously supplied. Then, placing my watch and portmonnaie under my pillow, and turning the gas half down, I again sought repose. But that shadow over my soul deepened.

"I am out west upon the very borders of barbarism!" I glared wildly about the room, and guided by unerring, but inexplicable instinct, I glanced above the doors, when, to my horror, I beheld over each a treacherous transom, down through which, looking directly upon me, beheld!—there was no one, but there might have been. With a suppressed howl of indignation and a spiteful feeling of antagonism tugging at my heart, I climbed upon the table and pinned various articles over these transoms. Somewhat exhausted, I again sought my couch. My head had scarcely touched the pillow when a terrific maniacal yell reverberated through the air. Appalled, I started up.

"We're attacked by Indians! The savages are upon us! 'Tis the war-whoop of those bloodthirsty demons!"

It was repeated, but, thank heaven! 'twas only the shriek of a locomotive. Agitated beyond description, and wandering in my overshadowed soul if I should live till morning, I again, for the fourth time, perseveringly retired to rest, and it might be supposed I should be permitted to sleep. For a few moments I listened intently for the footfall of approaching fiends, but my heart made such a noise I could hear nothing else. At last I heroically resolved to remain awake all night, rather than be murdered in my sleep—when, all of a sudden, and without the least intimation or warning of impending danger, I never knew anything more till the next morning.

I was so grateful to learn on awaking that neither tomahawk nor scalping-knife had terminated my existence, that I don't know what I might not have knelt down and done, had not a waiter appeared to conduct me to the dining-room, where I thankfully prayed upon breakfast.

Then the train came up and I started again. Conductors are so kind to femmes seules! The palace-cars were full.

"But," said the conductor, "here's a seat in this car, and you jest hold on to the whole concern. We're awful crowded, but don't you let nobody disturb you."

To act successfully upon such advice requires considerable vigilance and no little impudence. Becoming sleepy whenever the engineer whistled "down brakes" with my muff for a pillow, I reclined upon the seat, and thus retained the "whole concern," awaking only when the train started, and the new comers were supposed to have sandwiched themselves away. After passing the third station, upon sitting up and looking about I perceived several disconsolate-looking passengers minus a seat, and glancing covetously at mine. Before I could fall asleep again, a well-dressed, g ay-haired gentleman approached, and, apologizing for disturbing me, offered to take the seat.

"But perhaps you are fatigued—you wish to recline?"

"Oh, no, no—only when I see people with babies and canary-bird cages, and boxes and bundles," I replied, sadly resigning the seat.

"Pleasant weather to travel."

"Very," I said faintly, remembering my vow.

"Fine country we are passing through."

"Very," I replied, keeping my eyes on my book.

"Going far?"

"What shall I say?" I pondered. "I'm resolved not to talk; but then he's an old gentleman, and doesn't appear like a gay gallant. Going to Chicago," I said aloud, in a valedictory tone; but, alas! he had been to Chicago, knew the whole history of its rise, progress, decline and fall, and became seized and possessed of an irrepressible desire to tell me all about it; and then the prairies we were crossing came in for discussion.

"Plenty of room out here to live,"

"Any quantity," said I.

"Poor folks ought to come out here."

"That's a fact," said I; whereupon he dilated upon a subject that was dear to my heart—a scheme for inducing people to "go west." I was charmed, he was enthusiastic; away went my book, and I listened, highly edified.

Presently the conductor entered.

"Ticket, sir," said he to my companion. The gentleman examined his pockets while the conductor waited patiently, and then, looking up, he said:

"Why, I forgot to buy a ticket, and I haven't any money."

"I don't take no 'scuses, sir," said the conductor, sharply.

"I'm going to Fort Wayne. I guess you can pass me through."

"Pay your fare, or I'll put you off at the next station," was the savage retort.

"Put me off at Fort Wayne," reiterated the other.

"You'll see if I do when we stop at the next station," and the conductor passed along.

"Good heavens! This is lesson No. 2 for talking to strangers!" I groaned in mental anguish. "This would furnish aunt a text for the balance of her mortal career," and I returned to my book.

"I never pay railroad-fare," said the man, as the conductor passed away.

"You sneak! you vile abomination!" I thought, keeping my eyes on my book and making no reply. "What mortification I shall suffer if the conductor puts him off the train, and all the passengers have seen me conversing with him."

The stranger endeavored to continue the conversation, but, as I replied in frigid monosyllables, he soon plainly became disconcerted.

"I hope you didn't think the conductor was serious in what he said?"

"I think nothing about it," I replied, coldly.

"Ladies don't like to sit beside persons who refuse to pay their fare," he persisted, "and I thought I'd tell you it was only a little joke."

"Ah!" was all the response I made. "It can't be true, else they would have laughed or looked jocose. Oh, no, he's a pickpocket," and I sat close over to the wall in miserable silence. 'Let him pick my pockets if he wishes," I said, mentally. "He'll find only a couple of handkerchiefs for his reward;" for I carried my money elsewhere—not in my shoe, but in a safe place. I scanned the man under my eyebrows. "I've heard of false arms," I said to myself. "I wonder if those arms are real? What if they are artificial and his real hands are searching me! I'll look in my pocket! It's on the other side from him, to be sure; but then pickpockets' hands are ubiquitous and magical. No, his hand isn't there—at least I can't find it; but, dear me, I know he's stealing."

"Perhaps I had better ask the conductor to explain the next time he passes through the car?" said the man, after some silence.

"Not upon my account," I felt constrained to say. "Mercy! I hope he will," I thought.

Probably reassured by my reply, the man again attempted to resume the conversation. I could not encourage him; I was too much frightened and mortified. "Besides, I must keep watch that he doesn't steal. I don't know what he can take or how he can manage it, but I have a vague apprehension that he'll get the best of me before we reach the next station. Oh, if the conductor would only come! There he is! Now, if this man asks him to explain, it's all right; otherwise, he's a pickpocket."

The conductor passed unchallenged. My companion did not even notice him. I was then settled in my belief of his predatory character. My feelings were now apparent to the man, for I no longer endeavored to conceal them. I gathered myself and my possessions close to the wall, and kept a sharp lookout upon him. If he stirred hand or foot, I glowered upon him with an expression which said, "I want you to understand that I'm not asleep." I was, oh! so relieved when the signal for stopping was whistled. "Now the conductor will put him off. But dear me! how I hope they won't have a fracas! Oh, horrible! And how all the ugly ladies and crabbed old men are looking at me! I must appear—"

The train came to a halt. I looked around excitedly for the conductor. He was just stepping from the car behind ours to the back platform, but before he had opened the door my companion arose, thanked me for the seat, and passed out at the front of the car as the conductor entered at the rear.

"Well, they'll have their malice now in another car," I thought, as I saw the man enter the one before us. How relieved I am! Only I'm confident he has something belonging to me, and I shall never miss it till I reach Chicago."

Then I listened and watched for a tumult, but heard nothing till the locomotive screeched again and we were on our way.

In a few moments that beacon of safety, the conductor, brought joy to my heart by returning to the car.

"I do so want to know what they did with that man. I'll ask him." So, as the conductor passed my seat, I looked inquiringly into his face. He stopped, and I said confidentially, "Did you put that man off?"

"Ha! ha! ha! ho! ho! ho!" roared the conductor, and between puffs of laughter he said: "Why, that gentleman is Mr. ——, the son of the Pittsburgh and Fort Wayne Railroad. He lives at Fort Wayne."

Imagine my feelings. But how was I to know that he was an officer of the road, and not a sneak-thief; and how was I to know yesterday that the Gettysburg man would talk so awfully about the tunnel? Shakespeare says:

"There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face."

And elsewhere Shakespeare also says:

"Though all things foul should wear the brow of grace,
Yet grace must still look so."

Now, what are ladies to do when they travel alone? They might "get themselves up" repulsively, if they wish to avoid the snares of this wicked world. For instance, let them personate a Sister of Charity, whose flying headgarment will repel the invader; or let them go as a primitive Quakeress, for the deep depth of those drab bonnets will reb a tunner of all its terrors.

Another girl, let her go a-shingle her hair and order a full suit from Warnnamaker & Brown's. But, after all, perhaps the very best way is to "go just as you are," and enjoy the journey to the extent of your capacity. One thing remember—don't be flattered by mushroom love, nor indulge in romancing over the ardent admiration and enthusiastic compliments of amatory unfortunates, whose love springs up in an hour—because it has no deepness of earth, and because it has no root, it soon withers away." You may believe it is sincere, and sincere it is—while it lasts; but it lasts till they board the next train and spy out another pretty passenger. Romeo would probably never have drunk the apothecary's potion, had he met another beautiful maid on his way to Juliet's tomb. Unless some good Friar Lawrence is on the spot to "incorporate two in one" before Juliet is supplanted as she supplanted Rosalind, such men never arrive at the hymeneal altar. They can never bring their widely diffused love to a focus. But who would accept such a heart? It is like a worm-eaten cabbage-leaf—its texture is destroyed, and nothing remains but the outline.

As for these other perils of a journey which many good people worry about, they are nothing, if you go strongly armed with common sense. Don't be alarmed about anyone's running off with you; your consent is a sine qua non.

Sometimes vile villains, laboring under the hallucination that they are gentlemen, presume to regard themselves "encouraged" by happy, mirthful dispositions "that often jest and laugh;" but these can always

"Leave a proof by that which they will do—
Girls may be merry and yet honest, too."

VIDA VARNIE.

OLD THINGS.—King William IV had spoken with a man who had conversed with King Charles II, the merry monarch. In 1786 a person was alive who had conversed with a man who, when a boy, had carried arrows for soldiers the night before the bloody battle of Flodden Field. Another, about 1863, whose great grandfather saw King Charles I beheaded, was living. No public execution was ever more atrociously conducted or barbarously performed than that of the celebrated Duke of Monmouth, in 1685. It was absolutely shocking to the moral sense of the spectators. For a long time it was an epoch to reckon from by elderly persons. The executioner struck several blows with an axe, but the body continuing to move, he threw down the ponderous instrument, exclaiming, "I can't do it; my heart fails me." The axe was again caught and several more blows given without severing the neck. To intensity the horror of the appalling scene, a knife was actually resorted to for finally severing the duke's head from his writhing body, bound to the block. No wonder an event so shocking should have been long remembered. All over Europe very aged persons are found, as in America, but none that come up to the patriarchal years of Henry Jenkins, who died in 1670—one hundred and sixty-nine years old. Thomas Parr died in England, 1635, at the age of one hundred and fifty-eight! He testified in court in regard to a transaction that took place one hundred and forty years before.

A FRIGHTFUL GALE.—The horrible effects of a recent storm up the river are depicted in graphic colors by an editor, who, among other pieces of descriptive writing, says: "The storm of last week would seem to have been even more terrible at Sioux City than here. The tin roof of the Hubbard House was blown loose, the brewery was partially unroofed, while a schoolmaster, of whom no word of ill-repute had ever been said before, was hit in the hat by a brick and knocked flatter than a clam's nose." Such are the fearful scenes to which the westerner must become accustomed.

TWO OLD Scotchmen conversing lately about a fine cemetery recently opened, in the vicinity of which they lived, fell out about the merits of the "newfangled graveyard." One of them boldly expressed his aversion to it in the remark: "I'll rather no dee ava than be buried in sic a place!" His companion, who held an exact y opposite opinion, retorted, "Weel, gin I'm spared in life an' health, I'll gang naewhere else."

VERMONT—where, as is well known, no liquor is sold—has sixteen thousand drunkards, four thousand habitual "hard drinkers," and twenty thousand young men just beginning to drink.

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

IS IT A SIN?

If it be a sin to love thee, then indeed my soul is dyed
With a stain more deep than crimson, that hath all the world defied;
For it holds thy image dearer than all else this world hath given,
And regardeth thee as dearer almost than its hopes of heaven.

If it be a sin to worship deeply at an earthly shrine
With a fervent adoration, then indeed am I truly mine;
For those art to me perfection, and my homage is laid down
With far more of adoration than if thou didst wear a crown.

If it be a sin, this yearning, this mad, passionate desire,
Ever on love's altar burning with a fierce and constant fire,
That oft reaches out toward thee more than reason can control,
I have sinned past all forgiveness! and have perilled my fond soul.

If it be a sin to shrine thee in my mind each waking hour,
And in dreamland to be near thee ever by love's magic power,
If so grieve for absent moments, and to look for future joy
Only in thy hoped-for presence, life is sin without alloy.

If it be a sin to love thee, I must sin still more and more;
For my helpless heart clings to thee even as it hath before.
But I draw aside the curtain of my soul, and look within,
Faith and conscience make me certain love like mine cannot be sin.

THE SOCIAL EVIL QUESTION.
A Woman's Protest.

Mrs. Mary A. P. Filley, at a lecture given in St. Louis, Mo., on March 5th, in the course of her remarks said: "What calls us together to-day? The great moral question of this age. Not a popular one, however, for discussion, and before which we would all shrink into nothingness if God would only let us. He has planted in us all a natural shrinking from this painful duty, and this delicacy which makes us shrink is, no doubt, the strong incentive to action. Without it we should not be able to rise above the odium which the friends of this vile law will try to fasten upon us all. If we go to the highest tribunals of man's creating, the courts, we find one of our sex dragged to be sentenced for a crime which she cannot commit alone, and the very MAN whose own debasement has brought her before him sits in judgment for her condemnation and punishment. So that the money that he gave so freely for his own pleasure when gained and satisfied is drawn back again into the public coffers, to help sustain the very judgment-seat from which she is condemned. Not being content with the feeling that the 'laborer is worthy of his hire,' the pittance that he has doled out goes to compensate for a crime that can have no price. Every female child comes from its mother's womb as pure as ores from their mother earth. Man separated the pure from the dross. What use does he make of that dross? Does woman stand alone accountable? Here in our midst the benevolent nature of our unthinking people is to be worked upon. They are appealed to to permit a hospital to be erected for these unfortunate females that would suffer and die were it not for this timely aid which our city council are offering them. In their great benevolence it is to be supported out of the money that men have paid for this momentary pleasure obtained through sin. That money is not left with the woman who has earned it at the risk of having disease communicated to her. It is taken for the support of a so-called benevolent institution, which shelters her until she can again be sent out, healed, to be dealt with in the same manner as before. And our city physicians! What is their duty? This law obliges them once a week to examine the persons of these fallen women, and this was so disgusting that I have heard of an instance in which they refused to serve. I am not willing to feel that these women are so degraded that it is not obnoxious to them, as it was to our colored women, to be stripped and examined to see if they were properly sound. Is it possible for a high-minded man to fill that position? I am sure you will all join me in saying "No!" This evil does not stop with its immediate victims. It is handed down to the "third and fourth generations." We of the present will not so strongly feel the ill-effects of making houses of prostitution safe for our fathers, husbands, brothers and sons. Was sin ever safe? I am told many of our ladies object to using their names made public. How can we benefit the public in this movement, if we are not willing to have our names brought before them?

"If it were possible to get a vote from the plain people in this community upon that law, I think every man that has sanctioned it in any way would like to let the earth open to let him in to bury, if possible, his disgrace. It is the wealthy men of our city that will pass the money through these women's hands to the hospital. The poor have not the means. The middling class is the balancing power. The lowest society in all countries is produced by the highest. Some feel that we ought to try the system longer as an experiment. We would seem that seventy years' trial in France, with its results, ought to convince us of its damning effects. I have heard of a Frenchman who said Paris was the most sensual city in the world, except New York. It rather grated on my ears as an American. We do know that the underground city in New York is as bad as the same in Paris, but we are not quite prepared to feel that society generally disregards the marriage-tie there as they do in France. Although this is a great evil, even among our unfashionable people, we do still feel the old puritanical idea that the oath which is taken to forsake all others and cleave to 'this one' still clings to a large majority of our people, and they frown upon all innovations. Another reason was given me by one gentleman, who said it was better than the old system, for now these women could not be raided; whereas before, when business grew dull in lower courts and the lawyers were idle, they induced the police to make a raid, and had these poor, unfortunate women dragged up for fine or sentence. I feel that these lawyers and the city physicians should be classed together and kept out of the pale of decent society. Then, again, another argument in its favor is that women are kept from the streets and cannot allure strangers who visit the city, nor continually tempt virtuous men. It's the country merchants and well-to-do business men who visit our city, the husbands and fathers who leave families that pin their confidence in their virtue and integrity; yes, and think it is self-denial, too—this leaving home, wife and children, and risking their lives on a railroad or steamboat—all for the good of the dear ones at home. Often the wife quietly asks for some well-earned article of dress, or the little ones wish some toys, etc. The father leaves that quiet home and is met by these women, who entice him to their hot-beds of vice, and he never returns to his family again. Many a husband and father who has lived in a moral clover, contrary to the statute in such cases made and provided. The case was brought before the grand jury, but that body did not indict either of the parties. Since the above was in type, two of the parties paid the penalty of their crimes by committing suicide. The history of the affair, as near as we can learn, is as follows. Mr. Alexander Buser, lawful husband of the woman, moved into the house with his family (not a single man) three years ago last April. They had three children at that time, two boys and a girl, the oldest of whom is now thirteen years of age. A year ago last October, as Mr. Buser claims, he was driven away by Ruff, since which time Ruff and Mrs. Buser have lived in undisputed possession, the children remaining with the mother. On Monday morning, when the three children started for school, the mother told them that she was going to Waseca. The children remained at school during the day, and when they went home in the evening found the door fastened. Supposing that their mother had not yet returned from Waseca, they went to the house of Mr. Spilane, about a quarter of a mile away, and remained over night. On Tuesday morning the eldest, a boy, and T. Tyen, another lad, went to the house, and, finding the door fastened, looked in at the window, when they saw Ruff lying on the floor, covered with blood, dead. These boys then went back and got Mike Spilane, Jr., who went back with them to the house. Messrs. Waldo and Whitman also visited the house, but no one broke open the door. Mr. Spilane's son then drove to Waseca, and informed the coroner, Dr. McIntosh, who summoned a jury and proceeded to the house. There they found the woman and child dead in the bed, with their throats cut square across, and Ruff on the floor dead, with his throat cut—the bed and room presenting a bloody appearance. It appears that the deed was done with the utmost premeditation. A large butcher-knife had evidently been sharpened for the occasion. The child's throat, evidently, was cut first—then the woman was murdered and laid upon the bed, and the child laid upon her arm. Ruff then cut his own throat and lay down beside them, but in his death agony turned over and fell upon the floor, face downward. Both of them wrote letters, which they left upon the table. One of these was directed by Mrs. Buser to a relative in Green county, Wis. These letters showed much sentimental affection between the two, and accused others of their trouble.—Waseca, Minn., News.

A KISS IN THE DARK.—A Vallejo, Cal., young lady, about to go off in the cars, stepped into the dark sitting-room of the depot to kiss her friend Sarah good-bye. Owing to the darkness she didn't hit Sarah, but caromed on a Chinaman, and didn't find out the mistake until John began yelling, "Whatee for you so chokee me? Hi yah! No squeeze so muchee!" One yell, a flopping of feminine garments, a slammed door, and that girl was gone.

PROTECTION FOR FEMALE VIRTUE.—A bill, of which the following is a section, is before the Missouri Legislature:

Section 85. Every male person who shall seduce or debauch any female, while such person is under a promise of marriage to said female, and shall refuse or fail to marry said female, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two years nor more than five years; and such conviction shall not bar any civil action against such male person by such female for damages for breach of promise of marriage.

A STUDENT who had a better knowledge of hymns than of some of his studies, one morning when asked to spell and define prone, created a sensation in the class by replying, in a solemn tone, "p-r-o-n-e, to wander."

BASE-BALL.

THE PROFESSIONAL NINES OF 1872.

The latest addition to the nines which are to enter the professional arena for 1873 is that of the Resolute Club, of Elizabeth, N. J. Last season the co-operative nine of the Resolutes played some close games with the Mutuals, besides defeating the Atlantic and Eckford. Then they had a good nine, but this year they will be stronger in players than ever before, as they have secured the services of D. Allison, of the Eckford and Troy of 1872, and Welters, A. Allison and Kimball, of the Clevelands of last year, together with Fleet, of the Mutuals; Swandel, of the Eckford, and the brothers Campbell, Farrow, Austin, Langhim and Nevins, of the Resolutes of 1872. These players, properly placed and well captained, will form a strong team, and on their own field they should make things lively both for the Mutual and Atlantic. Unluckily this party contains players who have a great tendency to growl, a habit damaging to the interests of any professional club, no matter how skilful its individual players may be. The two Campbells—the one a splendid first-base player, and the other a swift underhand thrower and good general player, and both hard workers in a nine—are regular old time fault-finders. Then there is Austin, another fine player, especially in the out-field, who is one of the old Union school of grumblers, who cannot help it even when his party wins. "Dug" Allison, too, is inclined that way, and Rhiny Wolters is another, especially when the field fail to support his pitching. The others are only so-so, except Swandel, who is a very quiet, good-natured player. Now, if the Resolute managers can only harmonize these discordant elements into anything like working order, they may then hope for some very good results in the shape of fair play. But if the Resolute is to be run in the same style as it was last year, increased playing strength will be of no avail, and the result will be defeat. Harmony is a great element of success in the working of a professional nine, and without it the best men—as regards the individual skill of the players—will fail.

In 1869 the Cincinnati worked together with nearly thorough harmony, and the result was uninterrupted success. In 1870 they did not harmonize, and the consequence was a series of defeats which led to their dismemberment. The only difference in the experience of the two seasons' play was in the matter of working together as a harmonious whole. The players were the same, but there was not the same harmony. Harry Wright's success with his Boston nine has been largely attributable to the attention he has paid to this important matter of getting nine players together who would work well in harness. It is exactly like putting two fast trotters to a wagon. They may be Dexters in point of speed, but if they won't run in harmony together, a Shanghai donkey team that will can beat them out-and-out. Taking only the playing skill of the Resolutes into consideration, they undoubtedly have a strong nine. Allison is a fine catcher and Welters a very effective and experienced pitcher, and they have three excellent basemen in Mike Campbell, Kimball and Farrow, the latter being also a good catcher. Laughrin or Fleet would be good at short field, and with Arthur Allison, Austin and Hugh Campbell in the out-field and Swandel for utility-man, their team would be well placed. They will play on the Waverley Fair Grounds, and their field is to be rolled and prepared for use as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The covered stand, fronting the ball-field, can accommodate 2,000 people, and the ground can be readily reached by hourly trains from Jersey City.

Nick Young has got together a co-operative nine, with a view of keeping the ball in motion in the "City of Magnificent Distances," and has succeeded so far in including Tommy Beals, formerly of the Morrisania Union; Stearns, a swift underhand thrower of the Olympic nine, of Washington, together with White, Dagie, Waterman, Bulaski, Berthrong, Glenn, Hanna and Holly. Most of these we have not seen play often enough to place them, except Berthrong and Waterman, whose home-positions are at centre field and third base. Beals is a splendid player, or used to be, especially in the out-field.

The Marylands, too, of Baltimore, it is said, have got a nine together to enter the lists. At any rate, that club was represented in the Professional Convention at Baltimore. Their players are said to include Lennon and Brainard as pitcher and catcher—a fine team; and with such strong fielders as Sellman, Barrett and Hooper, together with Worthington, Kohler, Kernan, Smith and Goldsmith, they ought to be able to give the Baltimores some close games. If all these nines take the field in May, nine professional clubs will be in the arena at the opening of the campaign. How many will possess staying qualities sufficient to enable them to be in at the goal in November is a question.

We learn from good authority that McGeary is to play short-stop in the Athletic nine and McMullin left field; and that in case the "new catcher" is not engaged, Anson will go behind. This is an experiment that may and may not be a success. Anson ought to make a good catcher. At any rate, McGeary will be more serviceable at short-field than Anson. We have not heard of the engagements of O'Rourke—a fine player and good catcher—Boyd, Bass, Simmons, Carleton, Patterson, Belian, Henbel, Hodes, Pratt of Cleveland, and others of last year's nines. Bentley, the pitcher of the Mansfields, is dead. He was the victim of a species of consumption very prevalent among sporting-men, so one of his confreres informed us.

THE JUNIOR RED STOCKINGS.—The Boston, Jr., of Boston, held a meeting March 12th, and organized for the season of 1873. Mr. G. Wright was chosen president, and Mr. Cogswell, secretary. The directors are Messrs. Chandler, Hurll and Coe. The nine will be chosen from the following players: Stone, Baldwin, Hurll, C. Pierce, Powers, Ernst, Doherty, King, Pease, Coe, G. Pierce, Crane, Taylor, Pigott and Caton. The nine will be strong, and, it is thought, will be able to cope with any junior club in the country. The secretary's address is W. C. Cogswell, care of Geo. Wright, 591 Washington street, Boston.

PASTIME B. B. C.—This ball club, hailing from Rochester, N. Y., held an election for officers on March 10th, with the following result: President, Frank Shepherd; vice-president, Chas. Fletcher; secretary, Will S. Shannon; treasurer, Jacob Neil; directors—John Josiyn, Frank Shepherd and Wm. Kinsil.

PECK & SNYDER state, through a card in another column, that they have on hand a large stock of balls, bats and players' outfits; also fishing-tackle, archery, croquet, cricket, yachting and rowing goods.

NEW PLAYS AT THE LONDON, ENG., THEATRES.

"PUT TO THE TEST."

A new adaptation of the Marquis de Melloy's tragic play, "La Malaria," under the above title, was brought out at the Olympic on the 27th ult. It is from the pen of Dr. Messina, and its story is thus told:

Prince Colonel is the faithful, noble and devoted wife of Count Nello Della Pietra, a grimly jealous, cruel and amorous nobleman. An early incident in the marriage career has led the count to suspect the existence of a rival, and unable to wring from his wife the name of the intended paramour, a husband takes her to his castle in the midst of the Tuscan marshes and keeps her there awaiting the slow but certain death engendered by its deadly miasma. So mad is his love, he does not seek to curry favor with the princess by trying to stem the doom he inflicts. Time to await the lingering end is not afforded him. News of her thraldom has reached the father of La Pia, who sets forth to rescue his daughter from ro ghastly a fate. Arrived at the castle, he is denied admittance. Meanwhile the subtle poisons for which mediæval Italy was celebrated. A few drops of this sprinkled on the flowers the countess has received serve to render their odor deadly. An hour before her father's arrival La Pia smells of the fatal bouquet, the mortal faintness, the precursor of death, invades her senses. When the last moment is at hand the murdered wife is told the truth. An antidote is in the husband's hands, and he selects his mate and attendant, both practical mechanics. Such excitement has never been witnessed among the Italians since the days of Lucrezia Borgia, Clark and Butcher Joe, who were termed the fathers of the racing system. The stakes were $20 a side, while the outside betting was very brisk. The men from the Shannon backed McCarty, while the Castlereg men risked their money on Shields. Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday selected, and the day previous was spent in arranging the preliminaries. The logs of timber were hoisted on the benches, fined, and ropes drawn around, leaving a clear space of 120 feet for the contestants. Referee being chosen, it was left to select pals, attendants and referee. At seven o'clock, A. M., everything being in readiness, the contest began, Maroney and Connolly at the fifters, McCarty and the Prentice at the box. The logs being 50 feet apart. The signal being given, the contestants began their saws with vigor, McCarty and mate going slowly at first, while Prince and Shields worked together like a machine. At the first half-hour they rested for a few moments and at the end of two hours the opponents had over 10 feet. At half-past 10 A. M., both parties partook of lunch, lasting 15 minutes, and at 10.45 resumed their work and continued steadily till 1 P. M., when half an hour was taken for dinner. At this time both parties were about even, the stalwart giant making the saw tell at every lick. As the contest proceeded a large number assembled, for the most part mechanics, who took deep interest in the proceeding, and cheered the contestants to the echo, the attendants assisting in all respects to hasten the labor of the day. At half-past 1 P. M. the battle was renewed amid the most intense excitement, during which old Monks threatened to put a Mansard roof on old Ireland, but was quickly quieted by the police-officers, ten of whom were stationed in the vicinity during the contest. The sawing proceeded and progressed steadily, with the exception of the necessary halts, until 6 P. M., when a recess was taken for 30 minutes, McCarty having the first go, and Shields next 100. After recess they again began, and Shields and the Prince finished their work ahead of their opponents about 10 minutes, it being dark at the conclusion. The time occupied by both was as follows:

	Saws.	Time.
Shields and Prince	12	10h. 35m.
McCarty and Connolly	14	10h. 57m.

Referee, Philip Birmingham. Umpires, John Delaney and Thomas Conlon.

TESTING THE MUSCLE.—J. G. Sands, of Boston, wagered, some time ago, $250 against a like amount of R. H. Barnes', that Richard Pennell, of Lynn, could not lift a 150-pound dumbbell above his head in thirty minutes. The trial came off on March 11th, in Wood's gymnasium, in the presence of a large assemblage. Pennell failed after five attempts, in which he raised himself a horrible distance, his eyes protruding, his cheeks ghastly and the muscles of his right side deadly giving way. He offered to wager $100 that he would accomplish the feat inside of two weeks.

COCKING.

DUTCHESS CO. vs. WESTCHESTER CO.

Dutchess County Victorious.

A main between the counties of Dutchess and Westchester, the former represented by Messrs. Wade and Hannan, and the latter by Messrs. Cummings and Coughlin, was decided on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 11th and 12th inst., at a cock-known pit in Westchester county. The articles of agreement specified that each mould should fit cocks, at weights ranging from 4lb. 4oz. to 5lb. 11oz., and fight all that weighed in for $100 each battle and $1,000 the odd battle. Five to fly. At the 11th fly at 10 A. M. it was found that seventeen pairs had fallen in, and at 9 o'clock P. M. on the 11th inst. the sport commenced. James Conghlan handled and headed the Westchester birds, and Stephen Mosher the birds of Dutchess county. The Westchester birds had the call in the betting, $150 to $70 being offered and laid repeatedly that they won the main. They were composed principally of the Donoshick Derby and Irish strains, while the Dutchess county birds were mostly of the Lindley and Reed breeds.

First Battle.—Dutchess County pitted a dark red and Westchester a gray pyle; both heavy weights, scaling 5lb. 11oz. each. Betting $50 to $60 on Westchester, and the layers got the worst of it, the 5 mile the pyle was laid on Dutchess. Betting, $10 to $20 on the pyle, who had the best of the weights. But fortune still hovered over Dutchess county, for its representative champion won the fight in 9min.

4. Dutchess county pitted a brassback scaling 5lb. 7oz. and Westchester a brown red, 5lb. 9oz. in weight. The latter was the favorite, but although a good bird, he cou'd not stand against the fierce onslaughts of the Dutchess county warrior, and was laid out in the short space of 7min. The Dutchess county division uproarious with delight.

5. Westchester pitted a light red, 5lb. 2oz. against a Dutchess red pyle scaling two ounces heavier. Betting $50 to $40 on the pyle, and he did not keep his backers long in doubt as to the fate of their wagers, for he killed his antagonist in just 4min. The Westchester division down-hearted, and the Dutchess county boys correspondingly jubilant. Five successive fights for Dutchess.

6. Dutchess sent in a 5lb. 15oz. white pyle against a 5lb. spangle for Westchester. This was a well-contested and protracted battle, lasting 35min., and resulted in Westchester county scoring their first victory.

7. Dutchess pitted a black red against a Westchester red pyle; weights, 5lb. 15oz. The Dutchess division eagerly laid $80 to $40 on their champion, but the backers of these odds trembled for their investments many times before a throat-cut took all the fight out of the pyle. Time, 11min.

8. A brown reds; the Dutchess county bird weighing 5lb. 3oz. and Westchester warrior 5lb. 1oz. Betting, $40 to $25 on Dutchess county, but at the fifth fly the Westchester bird sent his spur through the brain of his antagonist and won the fight. Time, 1min.

9. A black gray, scaling 5lb. 6oz., for Dutchess, was opposed to a light red for Westchester 3oz. heavier. Even betting at the start, but during the long fight, which lasted 35min., the odds repeatedly fluctuated from one side to the other. Finally, Westchester scored her third victory against double that number for Dutchess county.

10. A black muff for Dutchess, 4lb. 9oz., against a birch for Westchester, 4lb. 7oz. At the 11th fly at the call of a cock mad hitter, laid out his rival, and won the bets of $20 to $25 laid on the muff's coming off victorious. Time, 2min.

11. A black red for Dutchess opposed to a Westchester pyle, weights, 4lb. 8oz. each. Even betting, and again did Westchester score a gamby-obtained victory. Time, 2min.

12. A brown red for Dutchess and a red pyle for Westchester; weights 5lb. 3oz. each. The fight was short, sharp and decisive, lasting 3min., and won by Dutchess county.

13. Two 5lb. 6oz. birds, a birchback for Dutchess, and a brown red for Westchester. The latter won in 4min.

14. Westchester pitted a handsome light red, scaling 4lb. 9oz. against a Dutchess blue fleed, weighing 4lb. 8oz. The latter was the favorite, but after fighting 11min. he received a notice to quit and a cut-throat. The score now stood even, each party having won 7 battles.

15. Two 4lb. 15oz. birds, a pyle for Dutchess and a black muff for Westchester. This was one of the best fights of the main, both birds being clean hard hitters and dead game. It was won by the Dutchess county bird, who was almost as badly cut up as the loser. Time, 5min.

16. Another pyle, scaling 5lb. 1oz. for Dutchess county against a Westchester black red, 3oz. lighter. Betting, $50 to $40 on Dutchess, taken freely. A 12-minute rattling fight ended in the victory of the favorite. This fight decided the main in favor of Dutchess county, whose partisans were uproarious with delight.

17. Two 4lb. 14oz. birds, a spangle for Dutchess and a birch for Westchester. At the third fly the spangle fell dead from a brain-blow, and Westchester won. Time, 3min. We give the summary:

Battle.	Dutchess Co.	Westchester Co.	Weights. lbs. oz.	Won by
1	Dark red	Gray pyle	5.11	Dutchess Co.
2	Hen feather	Black red	4.04	Dutchess Co.
3	Black red	White pyle	5.09	4.11 Dutchess Co.
4	Brassback	Brown red	4.07	4.09 Dutchess Co.
5	Red pyle	Light red	5.02	5.04 Dutchess Co.
6	White pyle	Spangle	5.13	5.03 Westchester Co.
7	Black red	Red pyle	4.14	Dutchess Co.
8	Brown red	Brown red	5.05	5.01 Westchester Co.
9	Black gray	Light red	5.06	5.05 Westchester Co.
10	Black muff	Birch	4.09	4.07 Westchester Co.
11	Black red	Pyle		4.05 Westchester Co.
12	Brown red	Red pyle		5.02 Dutchess Co.
13	Birch	Brown red		5.04 Westchester Co.
14	Black red	Light red	4.07	4.09 Westchester Co.
15	Pyle	Black muff		4.15 Dutchess Co.
16	Pyle	Black red	5.01	4.15 Dutchess Co.
17	Spangle	Birch		4.14 Westchester Co.

Dutchess Co. won 9; Westchester Co., 8.

MAIN BETWEEN LONG ISLAND AND N. Y.

Long Island Victorious.

A main between New York and Long Island was decided in a favorite pit not 100 miles distant from the Empire City, on Wednesday, the 12th inst. The articles of agreement for the main specified that each side should produce seventeen birds, nine cocks and eight chickens; the former weighing 4lb. 4oz. and 5lb. 30oz., and the latter from 3lb. 14oz. to 5lb., and should fight all that were matched for $50 a battle, and $500 the main. Owing to the weights of the New York fowls exhibited, only eleven couples fell in. Mulholland handled and heeled his own chanticleers, while the veteran Andy did the same good offices for the Long Island feathered warriors. There was a good assemblage of well-known patrons of the sport, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent fighting witnessed throughout the tourney.

First Fight. The heavy weights among the chickens, two five pounders, inaugurated the sport. New York sent in a yellow-legged black red, and Long Island one of the same color, with black legs. The first few buckles were fiercely contended on both sides until the Long Islander gave his antagonist a hard cu', which sent him staggering across the pit, and caused repeated offers to lay $10 to $1 on the former winning the fight. But odds never won a fight, as was well illustrated on this occasion, for when the New Yorker had recovered himself a little he set to work and, with a humdinger, laid out the Long Islander as flat as a flounder, and killed him in just 17 min. New Yorkers jubilant, and offering $100 to $80 on the main.

2. The light-weight chickens, two 3lb. 14oz. birds, both black reds. They were a vindictive fighting pair, and cut and slashed away till both were bloated, but eventually the Long Islander was hailed the victor. Time, 11min.

3. Long Island pitted a handsome red pyle, opposed to a New York black red, each pulling down the scale at 4lb. 9oz. Sharp work for a few minutes, but the Long Islander received a cut which laid him dead as a stone at the expiration of 9min. New Yorkers again in high spirits.

4. A blue red for New York and a brown red for Long Island, each 4lb. 8oz., and as handsome looking birds as were ever pitted. New York was the favorite, and a better battle was never witnessed. The cutting was severe on both sides for several flies, until the Long Islander went down from weakness consequent on loss of blood. But he was soon up again and at it, causing the odds to change in his favor when he gave the New Yorker a severe cut-throat. The blue red, however, was dead game, and kept pegging away until a cut throat sent down the Long Islander a second time on the carpet. A pause now ensued and both were in a bad condition from their terrific cutting up, when suddenly the New York bird got and sent his spur through the brain of his Long Island rival with such tremendous force that it was with difficulty extricated. Time, 46min.

5. Long Island pitted a 4lb. 6oz. blue red chicken and New York a 4lb. 8oz. black red cock. The former was the cleanest cutter, and the betting soon became $60 to $30 on him, when the New York representative began to trot around the pit to avoid punishment. The young 'un persevered and laid out his opponent in 14min.

6. The heavy-weight cocks, scaling 5 lb. 10oz. each, and both black reds, were now pitted. At the start both were loth to go to work, until a sharp reminder from the spur of the Long Islander started this old Gothamite into activity, and the battle began in earnest, with offers of $20 to $8 on Long Island. The latter got a cut-throat, which equalized matters, and then both became blinded. At last the gameness of the Long Islander pulled him through, and he made his antagonist a fit subject for potpie. Time, 21min. The scores were now even, each having won three battles.

7. Two black reds, 4lb. 3oz. each, and chickens. Sharp work for a few flys, when the New Yorker got a leg disabled, and it was 20 to 1 on Long Island. Another cut and the New Yorker became a runaway, the first and only one of the fight. Time, 9min.

8. New York pitted a blue red "blinker" against a Long Island muff pyle, the former scaling 4lb. 9oz. and the latter an ounce lighter. This was an exciting affair, and alone worth the $25 admission money. The Gothamite seemed as savage as a bulldog, and his fierce onslaught staggered the muff at first. But recovering, he gave the blinker a blow which rendered him stone blind, and all sorts of odds were given and taken. The blinker was game despite his blindness, and first one and then the other was cut down, and up again as furious as ever. At last the Long Islander obtained a decided advantage, which he retained until he won in 36min.

9. The metropolitans pitted a grand-looking black with black hackle, 4lb. 3oz., against Long Island's black red an ounce less, but a reliable veteran who had oft won before. It was a punishing fight, both losing their way in the first few flies, and both badly cut up, but game as ever. It was anybody's fight for 40 min., and then the Long Islander's head began to droop, and the New Yorker had the call. Still each handler was equally confident, for the New Yorker got the count and his bird was adjudged the winner. Time, 56min.

10. Two 5lb. 3oz. birds; a black red with dark hackle for New York, and a black red with white hackle for the Islanders. The latter was a clean, hard hitter, and killed the Gothamite in 9min. This fight gave Long Island the main.

11. New York sent in a brassback cock 4lb. 7oz. against a black red chicken 4lb. 10oz. for Long Island; the former the favorite. At the very first buckle, the black red brained the brassback and won. Time, 3sec. Summary:

Battle.	New York.	Long Island.	Weight. lbs. oz.	Won by
1	Black red	Black red	5.00	New York.
2	Black red	Black red	3.14	Long Island.
3	Black red	Muff pyle	4.09	New York.
4	Blue red	Brown red	4.08	New York.
5	Black red	Blue red	4.05 4.06	Long Island.
6	Black red	Black red	5.10	Long Island.
7	Black red	Black red	4.02	Long Island.
8	Blue red	Muff pyle	4.09 4.08	Long Island.
9	Black	Black red	4.07 4.06	New York.
10	Black red	Black red	5.07	Long Island.
11	Brassback	Black red	4.07 4.10	Long Island.

Long Island won 7; New York, 4 fights.

AN IMPORTANT COCKING MAIN is to be fought at Cincinnati, O., on the 20th and 21st inst., the rival chanticleers representing Louisville and Maysville, Ky. The conditions are to show twenty-one chickens each and fight all that fall in, for $500 a battle and $1,000 the main.

A CHICKEN CONTROVERSY, for a small stake, took place at Peoria, Ill., on March 4th, between a black red owned by Bill Cockberry and a blue red belonging to Ed Ryan. They fought with 1¼inch fair gaffs, and Ryan's bird won in twenty-nine minutes, the other being too badly used-up to continue.

PEDESTRIANISM.

SENN'S MILE CHALLENGE CUP.—This trophy was contended for, in addition to $25 a side, at the Royal Oak Park grounds, Manchester, Eng., on Feb. 22d, by R. Rogers and J. Shaw. Rogers has been before the public for about nine years, is 27 years of age, and 5ft. 6¾in. in height. His past performances are so well known that it is needless to recapitulate them on this occasion; indeed, their number is too great for the space at our disposal. He trained under the Hughes system, and is a good fellow. Shaw, who has made a considerable reputation, has nearly completed his 25th year, is 5ft. 8in. in height, weighs 146 lbs., and was, at present, trained by W. Lang, and his condition left nothing to be desired on the score of fitness. Specialties began at 4 to 1 on Shaw, and the odds increased till they reached 7 to 1; after which Rogers had the call, and 5 to 4 were offered on him in turn. Before the start there was, however, a reaction in favor of Shaw, and he finally went to the front the favorite at 7 to 4 on Shaw over the mile, and took the inside position, and the pair were sent away to report of pistol by J. H. Cooper. For 30 or 40 yards they ran level, then Rogers, making the running, showed in front, led by three yards at the Chimney Turn, by four at the top of the straight, and by two at the end of the first lap (321 yards). In the second lap no change occurred, but midway along the top end of the course, in the next and last circuit, Shaw closed up, and in turn took it; he entered the straight three yards ahead of the Londoner. Down the straight Rogers, however, came again pluckily, raced up to his man in the last 100 yards, shot past him once more, and the race was over, as Shaw pulled up, beaten 30 yards from the tape, and Rogers finished alone in 4min. 36sec. J. Cooper was referee.

QUARTER OF A MILE RACE.—George Walsh and H. Whitehead ran 440 yards for £25 a side, at the Royal Oak Park grounds, Manchester, Eng., on February 22d, nearly 1,200 persons paying for admission, and the afternoon was sold after a rainy morning. Betting was in favor of Walsh from the outset, it being generally believed that Whitehead's once wonderful turn of speed had quite left him, as indeed, the result of the race evidenced; still, 5 to 4 was laid before the start 3 to 1 was the price offered, with but few takers. Walsh was attended on the mark by W. Fish and Sam Yates, Whitehead by J. M'Masters and J. Nuttall. The race itself requires little description. Walsh made all the running, led by three yards at the Chimney Turn, by four at the top of the straight, where Whitehead was settled, and never extricated at any time. Walsh trotted in the easiest of winners by 12 yards. Time, 54½ seconds. J. Cooper was referee, and J. H. Cooper acted as starter.

William Johnson, who is also called "Buffalo Bill," has been arrested near Dubuque, Iowa, for horse-stealing. At the time of his arrest Mr. J. was engaged in giving his celebrated feature act "Life on the Plains."

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

D. T. BRACE, Chicago.—Welcome to our corps. The problems shall have due attention.

DAMAGE.—A. K. E. "cannot down" handsomely in re Prob. 834. LIBERTY.—"Well, Damaris" is a trump! He has gone and done it after all. It may not be worth while to make the correction at this late day (no day is too late to correct an error), but the difficulty can be remedied thusly:—Add a White Rook at Q R sq, and Black Pawns at Q R 5, 6 and 7th. I cannot for the life of me do it in any other way. P. S.—See by this that I still read the Clipper, which comes to Santa Fe, as well as to every other corner of the universe,—as it looks to me." Problem No. 835 will then stand as corrected.

WARREN.—King at his R3; Queen at K 3; Rooks at Q R sq and Q B 6th; Bishops at K Kt sq; Knight at K 5; Pawns at Q Kt3, K R5, K Kt 5 and 7th.

BLACK.—King at Q 4; Bishop at Q 3; Knight at K Kt sq; Pawns at Q B 6, 6 and 7, Q Kt 2 and K Kt 7th.

White to mate in three moves.

THOS. M. BROWN.—Spoken with the seal of a true friend: will try to answer next. Thank you for the present; 'twas a different version from that we had. Your surmise about Prob. 831 is correct, as is your solution, of course. Criticisms always welcome.

GEO. E. CARPENTER.—New instalment of "Notes" to hand: thank you.

THE GAME IN WISCONSIN.—A chess club, with Capt. Charles Franzs for president, J. M. Stebbins treasurer, and William Robinson for secretary, has been started in Kenosha, Wis. There are players in that city holding a good local reputation who have volunteered to instruct all new comers in the mysteries of the game. Some years ago Kenosha boasted or rather a strong club. The executive committee of the newly-organized club are: F. K. Lovell, E. M. Rogers and A. S. Edwards. The club meet every Wednesday and Saturday evening in the German Concordia building.

NUMBER XXIX.

WHITE.—King at home; Rooks at Q R sq and K R sq; Bishops at Q B 2 and K Kt 4; Knights at K B sq; Pawns at Q Kt 4, Q B 3, Q 5, K 6 and K R 3d.

BLACK.—King at his R 2; Rooks at K sq and K Kt sq; Bishop at K 3; Knight at Q B 5; Pawns at Q R 2, Q B 4, Q 5, K B 5 and K Kt 6th.

White mates in three. 1, Kt to K 3 (K to Kt 6); 2., Castles on K's side. B to P 5: 3., Kt to B 5 mate. The solution should read "Kt mates," as above, and not "B mates," as EUCLID gives it. McL.'s note that "solution should read B or Kt mates" is hardly warranted by a due consideration of the terms. It will be observed that the mate with Bishop does not enter in any discreet variation; for, whatever the Defence plays, mate may be given with the Kt. There is but one variation, and the best form in which to put this is by giving to the Defence the move 1. B to P. It must be borne in mind that this position is the termination of an actual game, as is stated to be the case in Chess Player's Chronicle, Vol. X, p. 65. (Kling, White; Amateur, Black). This explains the amount of useless lumber piled on the board, as well as the 1st move of the Attack—"Castles." Were the idea to be problematized, the first move might be made Kt to Kt 3, sacrificing the Kt. Not to interfere with White's 3d move, as "erroneous" as it may be, the following is given as a correct solution of the manner in which this modification may be accomplished:

WHITE.—King at home; Rook at K R sq; Bishops at Q Kt 4 and K Kt 4; Knight at K B sq, and Pawns at K B 4 and K R 3d.

BLACK.—King at his R 5; Bishops at Q B 3 and K Kt 2; Knight at Q 3; Pawns at Q 4, K B 5 and K Kt 7th.

In 3 moves. 1...Kt to Kt 4; K Kt; 2..Castles; 3..B mates.

NUMBER XXX.

WHITE.—King at his B sq; Book at K B 3d; Bishops at K 8 and K R 8th.

BLACK.—King at his R 8, and Pawn at K R 7th.

White mates in three. 1...R to R sq +; 2..R to K R sq; and 3..B mates.

AN XL-ent composition, and one that has been largely imitated. Among others, compare Prob. No. 30, of Brownson's Tourney Book, by H. E. Agnel:—

WARREN.—King at his R 6; Book at Q R sq; Bishops at Q R 7 and K R 8th.

BLACK.—King at his Kt 7, and Pawn at K R 7th.

White mates in two moves, by 1..R to K R sq, etc.

In transcribing, this position has been brought from the left to the right hand side. See, for a slight variation in the idea, No. CXIII.:—

WHITE.—King at Q R sq; Bishops at Q 4 and K R 5, and Kt at K Kt 4th.

BLACK.—King at his R 8; Pawns at Q R 7, K R 6 and K R 7th.

(d) The + with Q would have been scarcely better, e. g.:

15...Q to Kt 3 +	17...Q × K R
16. K Kt-B 7 +	18. R × Q

Q B × R
Q × Q P, etc.

(e) Compulsory. Should he attempt the defence of the Rook by Q to her B 2, Defence replies K B to Q 5, and then, if 20...Kt × B 21 P, K R to B 7, and if 20...K R to Q B sq, etc.

(f) A most remarkable position, truly. It has looked as though the Attack must win something—yet two more moves leave him absolutely attacking nothing!)

(f) Why? To be sure, he is in deadly peril from the hostile pawns; but thought he might have gained time by exchanging the piece sacrificed for an equal one, even then victory for the Defence would have been rendered scarcely more doubtful.

(g) Correctly played, as he cannot take the Kt P.

CHEQUERS.

To Correspondents.

H. SPAYTS, Buffalo, N. Y.—Thanks; will write by mail soon.

H. O. B., Troy, N. Y.—1. Mr. Mercer does not reside in this city. 2. We are unable to state Mr. Drysdale's whereabouts.

MARCH AT ST. LOUIS.—On the 10th inst. a match of thirty-one games was played at the Mound City between E. M. Burdett and W. L. Barde, $500 a side being at stake. Burdett won the 9th and 18th games, when they adjourned for dinner. Barde won the 17th, 21st, 23d, 24th and 29th games; the 26th and 31st were not played, as they would not enable Burdett to score what Barde had won. Some brilliant moves were made by both players, but no doubt Burdett was overmatched. John L. Martin officiated as referee.

DECISION IN A SNOW-SHOE RACE.—The experts to whom was referred the judge's decision in the case of the competition for the mayor's cup at the Maple Leaf meeting have emasculated said decision, awarding the race to the Indian Thomas. Boyle was the only white man who ran out the race, and laid claim to the cup on the ground that the race was understood to have barred the Indians. Experts' decision: "1st. Where a race is advertised without a proviso, all entries are equal. 2d. A presentation cup makes no difference unless a proviso is given along with it. Such proviso will override all rules for that particular race. 3d. The Mayor, when presenting the cup, attached no proviso with it. 4th. Consequently, upon these grounds we unanimously decide in favor of the Indian, giving the cup and race to Thomas. (Signed) W. L. Hadley, H. Rogers, Pr. Kirwin. Montreal, March 11th, 1873."

TO APPLICANTS FOR CORRESPONDENTS' POSITIONS.—While thanking the many gentlemen who have proffered their services as correspondents, we would respectfully inform them, and all who may hereafter propose to act in that capacity, that we do not require any additional correspondents, and trust that this notice may be considered as a reply to the numerous applications we have received.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, March 17, '73.

We are in sore distress of mind on this bright and beautiful anniversary of the birth of the patron saint of Ireland, and we sigh for the days that are past. "Our attention has been called" to a number of articles in the Brooklyn Eagle, reflecting on the honesty, independence and vulnerability of the critics of the metropolitan daily press, and imputing sinister designs to a number of theatrical managers of this city. These articles have given us pain, grievously augmented by the silence of the parties implicated; and were it not that we have an inherent admiration and love for the professions so cruelly maligned, we should, like the critics and managers alluded to, treat the subject with the silence and reserve it probably merits, and suffer this Brooklyn bird to continue to spread its Eagle pinions, and soar to the far ethereal blue. But like Governor Dix we have a public duty to perform, and all the ecclesiastic influence and monied admonitions shall not tempt us from the strict performance of that duty. This Brooklyn bird of prey boldly charges that in this city there is a ring composed of the critics of six daily papers and the managers of several of our first-class theatres; that they play into each other's hands, that the former are in the pay of the latter, and obey their behests in every particular; that what appear in the daily papers as impartial criticisms of theatrical performances are but the sordid creations of the box office, skeletonized, as it were, by the managerial ring, and altered, adapted, and clothed with living flesh and blood by the hired myrmidons of an independent press. This Brooklyn spread Eagle further alleges and charges that stars about to appear in the great metropolis of America undergo the bleeding process at the hands of this ring, and instances Mr. Boucicault as having paid a certain amount of money to be let alone and otherwise treated with due courtesy and set forth in h's New York engagement, and the sum of one thousand dollars is said to have passed between the high-contracting powers. This Mr. Boucicault feels called upon to deny in terms of alleged indignation, which would seem to throw a great responsibility upon his agent. By the card which disclaims this unjust suspicion, we learn that Mr. B. is "one of those" who forbid bribes and rewards can be received and retained; which will make it plain sailing for those who may hereafter seek to manipulate the great dramatist. But this insatiate Eagle again comes up smiling, plumes its wings, and repeats its dulcet strains of melody; saying that the money changed hands in one of our uptown club resorts, and in consideration of the sum hereinbefore mentioned each of the critics was to perform a certain part in the comedy-drama, all tending to the good of the dramatist and his play, each critic having an equal divvy in the general distribution. Somebody or other is said to hold a receipt for that one thousand dollars, which did not come in a direct route from the Credit Mobilier. Is it any wonder that we are pained and grieved at this sad condition of affairs in a city where we have a right to look for better things? What a bad egg this Brooklyn Eagle must be! What a loose screw or, on emotional insanity, this same journal sarcastically says that plays written by other than managers, their hired critics, and members of the ring, have no show in the metropolis; be the plays of the outsiders never so good, their language high-toned, moral, and filled with interesting incidents, their doom is sealed unless they make their peace with the "grand combination," and these a month, be it known, is a long time. We are filled with sadness at this alleged expose by "yon sordid" Brooklyn wretch, who has dared to invade the sanctity and privacy of a family circle, and ghoul-like feast and fatten upon the corpses of its victims. As if to add insult to injury, this same Eagle bolsters itself and its accusations through the aid of a little programme sheet called The Stage, from whose columns it translates to its own a statement, as follows:

It may be of interest to our readers to know what impartial criticism costs the New York Theatres. We have, therefore, obtained from the Collector of Internal Revenue the salary lists of all the theatres, and from this we learn that the critics of the Times and World receive the following sums regularly all the year round:

Fifth Avenue per week	$35 00	Union Square	$0 00
Booth's	50 00	Wood's Museum	15 00
Wallack's	50 00	Niblo's	75 00
Grand Opera House	25 00	Olympic	50 00

The Herald and Tribune average one-third more. The Sun and Evening Mail about one-half as much.

There must be some mistake about this. What has the Collector of Revenue to do with salaries, we should like to know? We merely append this brief table so that the gentlemen implicated may see it in the recognized theatrical organ of America, and refute the base insinuations and calumnies of these vapid vampyres. Naturally, the gentlemanly instincts of the parties mentioned would prompt silence; their own reputation would bear them unsullied, unstained, on the turbid waters in which the Brooklyn Eagle seeks to destroy them; but when the independence, the virtue and high moral standing of the journals they represent are thus ruthlessly assailed, the man must give place to principle, and the freedom and honor of the press be maintained inviolate. It is not asking too much, therefore, that a proper denial of these charges and these figures should be made by the gentlemen interested. The entire subject has brought with it a feeling of sorrow, of regret, that even a shade of suspicion should have given the vampyre of Brooklyn an opportunity to expectorate its venom upon the hitherto untainted honor of metropolitan critics and managers. There should be no such feeling of envy and jealousy between two cities joined together by all the ties of love, faith, hope and charity, and why Brooklyn, with its pious temples piercing the ambient air, should seek to dishonor her own flesh and blood, gives us pain, as it were, and fills our soul with anguish.....

As we write, the street in front of our office is filled with thousands of persons, witnessing the passage of the procession in honor of St. Patrick's day. The ear-piercing fife, the rattling drum, the trumpet's brazen sound, and the clang of cymbals make glad the hearts of the thousands who are out in their Sunday attire, enjoying the great holiday. "Our Jim" is in his glory; too sick to work today, he seeks the shadow of the banners of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, with ad eundum to make him afraid, and marches along in the ranks of the loyal sons of the Emerald Isle. At the first sound of the drum this morning, Manager —— was taken suddenly ill, and actually produced a doctor's certificate which he had borrowed of an afflicted opera singer. But the youth, despite his severe illness, must have his little joke. "That there drum out there puts me in mind of somethin', boss," says he. "What is it, James?" "Tother day, as I was takin' a stew in Fulton market, I seen a Black Drum fish, the man called it, weighin' 444 pounds, he said. Think of that! I bet him it was only a hottle drum. Kin I go?".....And talking about this vicious boy, we were placed in possession of a ove letter the other day, which a traveling manager picked up in a hosteirie in the town of Meadville, Pa. We give a copy:

MEADVILLE, Pa., March 9, 1873.

FRIEND EMMA: As I promised you I would write I will now fulfil my promise. Em., this is a very Lonesum day here. I hav not bin out of my room but twice to-day. Miss Fanny B. Price and her Operia Trupe is to be hear to-morrow Eve, and I think I will stay and See her. There has been a goddeal of Excitement hear for the last week. I received my Photos last night, and will send you one afore I go to Baltimore. I will go as soon as I git home. So good by. Your Truly,

"Our Jim" wishes us to state that "he never sent such a letter; it was done by some other impostor, who had'nt no sense." We give the boy the benefit of the doubt.....

We will now, with your permission, compose a few verses about

YE "QUEER" SONG AND DANCE MAN.

There's a fearful sound of discord, enough to make one deaf—
He enters to the key of "C" and closes his song in "F."
The way he throws those number twelves is wondrous and complete.
It really seems as though his brains were centred in his feet.

"My love, she's like a fairy, and dances like a bird;"
(Well, that's the tartest orchestra I think I ever heard).
"I asked her to be mine one day, and what d'ye think she said?"
(Wait till I catch that clarionet, I'll basts his blooming head).

"She's got another lover—he sees her every night"—
(You chickle-headed lager-keg, why can't you play that right?)
"At ten o'clock exactly she gives his alba the mat;
She let's him get the big front door, and lets me in the back."

Of course he quit his "encore"—two boys can manage that—
And then he does "pathetic" songs, that always "hoss 'em fat."
The managers will have him, although some folks complain;
If he would study music, though, it might not be in vain.

....."Uncle Sam" is the attraction at the Grand Opera House this week, and it is but fair to presume that if any American women attend "the price of their honor will be ticketed upon them."....Several new plays of "singular emotional effect" are announced at the west side theatres, and strangely enough Manager Freligh, of the Bowery, notifies the public to "Look out for 'A Bad Lot.'" Although not apparent on the surface, nevertheless there may be a truthful connection between the two. Who knows?.....Papering houses unusually brisk just now, although regular paper hangers throughout the country complain of dull times. At some of our first-class theatres the paper business was never better, and yet managers say "there is no money in it."....It is not true that the model artist feature is to be revived in this city. Sardou's admirers might favor such a resuscitation at some of our model theatres, but Mr. Comstock and the Young Men's Christian Association would interpose an objection, so it is not likely that any revival of the kind will be attempted.....Look out for the circus and menagerie! The usual accidents and stories of fighting lions and things are already beginning to reach us, and if the people should be crushed to death by some unexpected elephant, or mangled by some quarrelsome tiger, let it be borne in mind that we lifted up our warning voice in advance. Barnum and Lent will soon open the ball in this city. With these two caravans, and Buffalo Bill and his Indians at Niblo's, New York will have excitement enough in April.....And talking about Christian Associations, it is with pride that we call attention to the fact that the Young Women's Christian Association has a charter from the Legislature, wherein "drinking and gambling in the rooms of the association" are forbidden. This is right; there are other places where these practices can be indulged in by the young friends without creating any feeling antagonistic to the morals of the society. The Legislature is wise, notwithstanding Tweed's seat has not been declared vacant.....And now a man wants to know how old Mr. Wallack is. Why, old Mr. Wallack died two or three years ago, which the inquirer might have known had he been an attentive reader of the CLIPPER.....If any of this stuff is unintelligible to you, dear reader, remember that it has been "written and composed" while twenty thousand men have been passing along with all the bands in town, and many from out of town, making music all the day. We were just about to narrate to you one of the best things you ever heard, and every bit true, too; but that big bass drum has knocked it clean out of our remembrance. A friendly son of St. Patrick is looking over our shoulder as we write this, patiently waiting for us to go out and "try a drop of genuine tay," and we've not been able to see a particle of the procession, and the end of the parade has been reached before we have seen the end of this sorawl. And so, peace be with you all.

City Summary.

A PANTOMIME, in which Mafflt and Bartholomew are to appear, will be produced at Niblo's Garden after "The Scouts of the Prairie."

GOSS AND FOX, song-and-dance performers, and Miss Jennie Murray, were the only fresh appearances at Tony Pastor's during the past week. The former performed a specialty entitled "John and Billy Jones," which met with much favor; their dancing being particularly commendable. They wore very long shoes with wooden soles, the rapid manipulation of which gave great effect to a double clog dance. The St. Felix Infant Ballet Troupe performed a quartet song and dance which was liberally applauded. Their costumes deserve particular mention for their elegance and taste. Kitty Rowell continued her serio-comic songs; Miss Jennie Murray and Frank Girard performed a new musical Irish sketch entitled "The Exiles' Departure" in a very satisfactory manner. Miss Murray has a pleasing appearance and is a good vocalist. Belle Gordon in song and dances, Tony Pastor's comic songs, Jennie Engel's sensational songs, Lizzie Stemple's skipping-rope dances, Irish songs by Johnny Moran, Charles and Marian Young in their specialty entitled "Simon Green's Trip to Cape May," and two or three sketches in which Billy Emmett, C. F. Seabert, W. Lester, J. Turner, Harry Hart, Frank Girard, Ned Gross, J. Runnels and the Misses Marie and Amelia Gorenflo appeared, filled out an enjoyable programme, which attracted a good attendance for the season. Mlle. de Granville, John Mulligan and Eugene Blitz are the fresh appearances of the present week.

A RECONSTRUCTION OF "LEO AND LOTOS" was placed upon the stage of Niblo's Garden on Monday evening, March 10th. Some few changes in the scenery, the principal ballet dancers wore new and tasteful costumes, and some fresh talent was introduced in the variety act; otherwise the spectacle remained the same as before. In the third act the novelties consisted of "The Rocky Mountain Wonders"—four gymnasts who performed various feats upon two ladders, which were favorably received; Richard Hoffman, a Swiss warbler, who sang in an artistic manner some songs after the manner of Tyrolean vocalists; and Senor Sparate, the "man-ape," who performed a number of gymnastic feats upon a long pole held by an assistant, who was made up to resemble an Italian organ-grinder. The performances were similar to those given in circuses under the title of "La Perche," save that Senor Sparate was made up like an ape or monkey. The "Almeyda" violinist; E. D. Davies, ventriloquist; the Siegrist family of acrobats, and the trained dogs were retained. An increased attendance was noticeable.

FRANK GIRARD, the stage-manager of and popular performer at Tony Pastor's, is to receive a benefit on Thursday, April 3d.

THE REAPPEARANCE of Leona Dare at the Athenæum constituted the only change there the past week. She displayed courage and excellence in her gymnastic performances.

B. T. RINGGOLD and Charles H. Rockwell do not remain at the Fifth Avenue Theatre next season, but will manage a traveling dramatic company, of which J. H. Stoddart will be the chief feature.

JOHN W. CARROLL is engaged for the coming season at Wallack's Theatre.

BUCKLEY & SHARPLEY'S OPERA TROUPE continued their performances at the St. James Theatre, during the past week, to an encouraging attendance. The performances commenced with the burlesque opera of "La Sonnambula," and was followed by Sam Sharpley's songs, with banjo obligato and interpolated original witty remarks. G. Swaine Buckley performed upon sundry musical instruments and gave a song and dance. Both of the latter performers were repeatedly encored, Fred and Annie McAvoy performed "Barney's Courtship," announced under the title of "The Emigrants; or, Good-bye to Old Ireland." "The Pirate's Chorus," from "The Enchantress," was well sung by Miss Brent and Messrs. Buckley, Frail, Frothingham and Fitch. "The "Houp La" duet, from "La Perichole," was passably rendered by Miss Eva Brent and Horace Frail, and the entertainment closed with a sketch arranged from the farce of "The Rough Diamond" and entitled "Fresh from the Farm," performed by Fred McAvoy, Horace Frail, G. B. Frothingham and Mrs. McAvoy. The burlesque opera of "Lucretia Borgia" is to be produced on the 17th, and the troupe have concluded to continue their performances, although their season was originally limited to two weeks.

THE REAPPEARANCE of the Matthews, the Matthews' family and Larry Tooley comprised the latest changes at the Theatre Comique. The performances upon the triple horizontal bars by Arthur Gregory and Theodore Matthews were one of the best features of the evening. Larry Tooley, after an absence of some months, sang in character a number of fresh Dutch comic songs and performed some excellent wooden-shoe dances. A number of fresh appearances are announced for this week, as will be seen by referring to the Comique advertisement.

THE SUCCESS of "Humpty Dumpty" at the Olympic Theatre continues unabated, owing in a great measure to the mirth-provoking antics of the "American Grimaldi," George L. Fox, whose artistic pantomimic powers nightly convulse the audiences with laughter. In addition to the already introduced attractions, the Wilson brothers, who have won much reputation as skilled gymnasts, will make their reappearance on March 17th.

MISS KATE RAYMOND, aided by Mr. O. B. Collins, commenced an engagement at the Bowery Theatre on March 10th, in the well-known drama of "The Waifs of New York." It was preceded by "The Creatures of Impulse," and the performances of John and Maggie Fielding in their Irish musical sketches, until Friday evening, when, for the benefit of Miss Raymond, "The Maniac Lover"—in which James Robertson (who had volunteered his services) acted Michael Erle—was performed. On Saturday, for the benefit of Mr. O. B. Collins, the late N. B. Clarke's drama of "The Irishman's Home" was given, and with that performance Miss Raymond, O. B. Collins and the Fieldings closed their engagements. On March 17th an entirely new drama by Barrett Sylvester, entitled "Destiny," is to be presented for the first time. "Jack Harkaway," and a new drama by Charles Foster, entitled "A Bad Lot," are announced as being in preparation.

MR. ALFRED AYERS, who modestly announces that he is not the greatest of living elocutionists, is to read scenes from "Hamlet" at Plimpton Hall, junction of Stuyvesant and Ninth streets, on Tuesday evening, March 18th.

"ROUGHING IT" was withdrawn from the stage of the Grand Opera House after the performance of Saturday evening, March 15th, and a comedy entitled "Uncle Sam" is to be acted for the first time on any stage this evening, March 17th.

E. T. STETSON closed his engagement at Wood's Museum on March 15th. Friday evening, "Daring Dick, the Detective," was produced. At the customary matinee performance James J. Bartlett acted in a sensational drama entitled "The Devil's Crag."

BATTERY B of the First division N. G. S. N. Y. on Sunday last gave at the Walhalla a dramatic entertainment, followed by a soiree dansante.

THE ALLGEMEINE SANGER BUND, together with the singing school established by that organization, gave a musical entertainment at the Germania Assembly Rooms on the night of March 16. Attendance large.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY presented last Saturday night Liszt's Dante Symphony and Haydn's Oxford Symphony. Mlle. Coradi was the soloist.

THE SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERTS of the Ninth Regiment Band will be inaugurated on the 23d at Terrace Gardens.

THE FIRST of the grand concerts in aid of the Wagner Union will be given in this city, and under the direction of Theo. Thomas, on March 26.

IT IS SOUGHT to augment the Woman's Educational and Industrial Fund by giving at Steinway Hall, March 20, an entertainment at which Miss Emily Faithfull will speak, and Miss Antoinette Sterling and others melodize.

"A BUSINESS WOMAN," an American comedy in five scenes, by Olive Logan, was first produced at the Union Square Theatre, on March 13th, with the following cast of characters:

Col. Collins Wold.	D. H. Harkins
Hooker Wood, Esq.	W. Edwards
Pembroke Potter	Geo. Parkes
Pallisy Ingraham	F. F. Mackay
Peter Pettigrew	E. Leach
Nelson Bland	Claude Burroughs
Asher Beazer	W. H. Wilder
Nicholas Hare	W. H. Smart
Thomas	Quigley
Hawkins	Sinclair
Mrs. G. Potter	Clara Jennings
Mrs. F. Ingraham	M. Griswold
Mrs. Hooker Wood	Emily Mestayer
Bessie Hare	Josephine Laurens
Marie McBeggs	Hattie Thorpe
Hannah	Charlotte Cave

Ladies, Gentlemen, Waiters, Servants, etc.

Theatre-goers have so long been fed with the stronger food of melodrama, gorgeous spectacles, and foreign dishes highly spiced with French immoralities, that it is difficult for them to appreciate a plainer home-made dish in the shape of domestic comedy; and the quiet, natural home-scenes, so commendable in a Robertson, are very apt to be voted dull and uninteresting when they emanate from the pen of a native dramatist, especially when it does not suit certain managers and certain critics to notice them favorably. The authoress of "A Business Woman" has given us a quiet portraiture of contemporaneous society, with some well-drawn characters and some that are not so striking; without much plot or any very striking incidents, but still a society picture of some merit; and as she has broken ground in a new and desirable direction, she is worthy of every encouragement. Perhaps the greatest fault of the comedy is that the heroine, although a very admirable character, endowed with a more than ordinary share of female virtues, fails to sufficiently enlist the sympathy of the audience in her behalf or concentrate its interest upon her actions; and we think Miss Logan might have imparted a fresher and more animated tone to her piece if she had given the business woman a secondary place, and constructed a plot which would have made Mrs. Potter, a correct and frivolous Mrs. Courtland Potter the central figure. In Hooker Wood, Esq., a lawyer, governed more by law than principle, she has given an excellent illustration of a class of wealthy business men unfortunately too numerous in all communities, and the contrast between him and his good old-fashioned wife and blunt, honest soldierson is also good.

The incidents which serve to introduce the characters of the play are an accidental meeting between Colonel Wood and Mrs. Courtland Potter on the piazza of Stetson's Hotel, in Central Park, during which Miss Fanny Ingraham, the business woman, and her father, Pallisy Ingraham, an unsuccessful inventor, make their début; and a meeting between Peter Pettigrew, nephew, Pembroke Potter, with the startling information that her husband is dead; a meeting between Ingraham and Hooker Wood in that worthy's law office, during which the lawyer lends Ingraham $40,000 through the influence of Colonel Wood, on conditions that Courtland Manor, worth $40,000, shall revert to him if the loan is not paid within a year; the return of Colonel Wood, who has been doing duty on the plains, and the rejection of his love-suit by Miss Fanny, the latter understanding that she has a kind of affection for the soldier, expects to compromise a lawsuit by marrying her nephew, and which takes place in a garden adjoining her residence; the revelation of Pelley Ingraham's forgery in the drawing-room of Courtland Manor, and of his daughter's noble sacrifices on her parent's behalf, and the final scene in the park of Courtland Manor, overlooking the Hudson, when the Ingrahams are about leaving their temporary home, and Colonel Wood and Pembroke Potter, who give their suits to Bessy for the money due. The Colonel and Fanny, who, it appears, were old lovers, then become affianced, and Pembroke Potter, after having divided with Le Saint the half of the property acquired by winning the lawsuit, is accepted by her. There is also a slight low-comedy plot running through the piece, in which Peter Pettigrew, a lawyer, figures as an absconder.

The scenery was good, the two scenes on the Hudson being very pretty, and the acting, generally, was commendable. Welsh Edwards interpreted Hooker Wood most faithfully; F. F. Mackay acted the eccentric Pallisy Ingraham with his usual excellence; D. H. Harkins appeared to embody the authoress' ideal of the "boy in blue;" Mary Griswold made all that she could out of the business of Miss Clara Jennings and played the fashionable Mrs. Courtland Potter acceptably; but Hattie Thorpe, as Maria McBegg, would have made a better Irishwoman if her brogue was a little richer. Emily Mestayer was very natural as Mrs. Hooker Wood, and E. Lamb extracted about as much fun as he could out of Peter Pettigrew. American society, so cosmopolitan in the larger cities, with its original and eccentric features, ought to be a rich mine of dramatical situations, and we are sorry this is not more worked. Undoubtedly a reasonably interesting story, clothed with chaste but not insipid dialogue, would become popular in the form of domestic comedy. We can vouch for as many saints in crinoline and pants here as they have in Europe, and Sardou says that "Uncle Sam" has faults enough to satirize; and if he has not, the amour propre of Sardou's countrymen, or the numerous absurdities of our other foreign citizens, will serve as well. Let some of our dramatic writers take up the theme, and if they cannot immortalize themselves with something American, we would suggest that they try their goose-points on an original French comedy.

MISS MINNIE FOSTER is to commence an engagement at Wood's Museum on April 7th.

J. W. MCANDREWS reappeared with Bryant's Minstrels on Monday evening, March 10th, and was heartily welcomed. He gave his remarkable impersonation of "The Watermelon Man" and also Uncle Eph. Dawson in the closing sketch, entitled "Uncle Eph's Dream," in which was introduced the song and picture of the old Kentucky home, and Dan Emmett's walk-around dance, "High Daddy." The changes in the first part consisted of "Katy Darling," sung by William Dwyer; "Dreaming of Olden Days," by Charles Templeton, and "Pity the Homeless," by Harry Norman. The attendance has continued excellent.

J. BAIN'S "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS" is to be exhibited at the Church of the Strangers, in Mercer street, on the evenings of March 19th, 20th and 21st, a matinee being given on the latter day. There will be a lecture, songs, and a chorus of one hundred voices.

L. J. MESTAYER is to receive a benefit at Wood's Museum on Tuesday evening, March 18th.

MISS LINA WEBER has a benefit at Wood's Museum on Friday evening, March 21st.

WILLIAM MARDEN takes his annual benefit at the Bowery Theatre on Wednesday evening, March 19th, when "a gentleman of this city" will make his debut on the dramatic stage, acting Hamlet.

MRS. W. G. JONES is to receive a benefit at the Bowery Theatre on Friday evening, March 21st.

W. J. FLORENCE concluded his performances at Booth's Theatre on the 15th inst. Nothing fresh was presented during the engagement, which was only moderately successful.

LUCCA, KELLOGG, and balance of the troupe under Maretzek's direction continue their operatic entertainments at the Academy of Music. Considering that we are in the Lenten season, the attendance has been fair.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN WILKES to make their opening on the 17th in his new play of "Daddy O'Dowd." The return of Mr. and Mrs. B. to this country has not been very successful, the lady's performances not coming up to expectations. She returns to England, while Mr. B. remains for some time longer.

TONY PASTOR was the recipient of a serenade on the evening of March 14th, and of an elegant gold watch presented to him by the members of his company. The presentation speech was made by Frank Girard, and the popular lawyer Charles W. Brooke made a speech in reply for Tony. The Navy Yard band furnished the music of the serenade. Mr. Pastor was escorted to his residence in Twelfth street, where he found a large number of prominent professional gentlemen awaiting him, and, amid the popping of champagne corks, a festivities were continued until nearly morning. A vocal quartet from Bryant's Minstrels discoursed eloquent music and Nelse Seymour assisted Tony in dispensing his hospitality. Altogether it was a very pleasant affair, and evinces that the best of feeling exists between the manager and his company.

MISS CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN is to read at Steinway Hall on Wednesday evening, March 19th, commencing at 2 o'clock, selections from "Romeo and Juliet" and miscellaneous pieces. On Friday evening "Macbeth," and Saturday afternoon a varied programme will be presented. As Miss Cushman shortly returns to Europe, these will probably be her last appearances in this city.

H. C. & G. C. DOBSON, the well-known performers upon and manufacturers of the banjo, have purchased the saloon in the Fourth avenue and Ninth street Rooms, formerly kept by George Brown, of Wallack's Theatre, and will be prepared to entertain their professional friends and the public with refreshments for the inner man, both spiritual and otherwise.

MR. SOTHERN remains at Wallack's for the present. Nothing new has been presented of late and nothing fresh is announced.

GUS. AARON BROWN, dramatic agent, of West Fourth street, states that the following artists can be engaged through his agency:—M. W. Lemingwell, burlesque and character actor, after March 29th; Thomas Jackson, comedian; Laura Keene, with her company, and James J. Bartlett, for the production of his new plays. Mr. Brown also states that he will leave for Europe on March 30th, and professionals who purpose crossing the Atlantic to this summer resort can secure reduced rates through him. For particulars see the advertisements.

TONY DENIER sails for Europe, by the Egypt, on March 26th, and goes all over the continent in company with Col. T. Allston Brown and wife, at which time the latter sail, instead of April 3d, as had been announced.

W. E. SPALDING, of Washington, arrived in this city on the 17th inst.

MISS LOTTA WEHYE, the veteran minstrel manager and performer, who has been dangerously ill at his residence in this city, was improving last week until the 13th, when a relapse took place, and on Sunday, the 16th, he was very ill.

MORRIS SIMMONDS, dramatic agent, 609 Broadway, inserts his card in another column, to which we refer managers and others.

HOWARD PAUL is to sail for England Tuesday, March 18th, and on his return, in August, will be accompanied by Miss Elise Holt, who will play star engagements through the country during the season of 1873-4, commencing at Wood's Museum on Sept. 1st. During Mr. Wall's absence he notifies managers and others, through a card in another column, that Morris Simmonds, dramatic agent, will attend to all of his business.

MISS HELENE SMITH, who has been lying ill for some time past at her hotel in this city, is recovering, and hopes to resume her engagement at the Athenæum on March 24th.

FOR E. D. DAVIES' FIRST BENEFIT in America, which is to take place at Niblo's Garden on Thursday afternoon, March 20th, the following artists are announced to perform: Dan Bryant, Tony Pastor, Dave Reed, Nelse Seymour, J. W. McAndrews, Luke Schoolcraft, George H. Coes, Turner and Lester, the Fieldings, M. W. Lemingwell, John Hart, John Wild, John Queen, Billy West, John Mulligan, Frank Girard, Americus, Mrs. E. Wright, the Misses Jennie Worrell, Jennie Engel, Le Claire, Coutts, Jennie Hughes, Bessie Sudlow and Laura Joyce.

Dramatic.

To Managers, Agents, Doorkeepers and Others.

To every authorized correspondent of the NEW YORK CLIPPER we have issued a card of a light green color, with an engraving of the CLIPPER building on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office and date of March 1st, 1873, affixed thereunto, each card running for six months. No person is authorized to use any other card, and all showmen are requested not to recognize or extend favors to any person unless he can produce a card like the above. During the past season many managers were defrauded and imposed upon by persons presenting an ordinary visiting card, bearing, in addition to their names, the words "Regularly authorized correspondent of the NEW YORK CLIPPER," and gave as an excuse for so doing that they had left their regular card at home. Our correspondents are requested never to use such cards, never to ask favors without showing their regular cards, and managers will save themselves from being imposed upon by demanding, at all times, the regular card. All cards of other colors previously issued are hereby revoked. Correspondents are requested to make their favors as brief as possible, as we have not space for voluminous reports. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are respectfully requested to consider silence a negative.

A. O. MILLER'S DRAMATIC COMPANY commenced a season of one week at Fort Wayne, Ind., on March 17th, under the management of P. L. Kirk and Harry Gray. Mr. Miller does not perform with them at present, being indisposed. The following is a list of the company: Susan Denin, Nellie Boyd, Edith Murray, Florence May, Clara Miller, Katie Gray, Mrs. Osborn, Milton Nobles, T. M. Morris, F. L. Kent, Harry Gray, Paul Harland, W. A. Brooks, J. L. Breese, G. H. Calvert, James Lowry and James W. Haynes. Prof. Kominski is the leader of the brass band and orchestra, and Charles Beaton the agent.

JOHN M. BERNARD, years ago an actor at the old Federal Street Theatre, Boston, Mass., died at Northborough on March 10th at the age of 82 years. During the past twenty-five years he had lectured on temperance.

AT THE BROOKLYN THEATRE "Ambition" was presented to full houses during the past week. "The Wife" was played to a full house on Saturday night. This week "

ment at this house.....Jennie Lee's second week with Chauncey Wade at the Globe has been almost as good as the first. Last night she appeared as Lady Macbeth. Mr. J. Sheridan impersonating Macbeth, and the cast otherwise being quite strong. On the 17th "Zion Ogo" will be given by the regular company at a matinee, and in the evening Jennie Lee will appear in "Adrienne Lecouvreur" for the first time in Boston. "Mary Stuart" and "Deborah" are in present rehearsal, and "The Queen's Evidence" has been commenced a second week at the St. James."

BLAISDELL'S NEW YORK AND WESTERN THEATER played to fine business, we are informed, last week, in Massillon and Wooster, O., and this week will be in Galion and Crestline. Miss Nellie Johnson, leading lady, who will hereafter be known as Miss Helen Mathews, joined this company at Salem, O., on the 8th inst. Mr. Charles Thornton, comedian, late of J. A. Stevens' company, joined Feb. 21st. Speaking of the company the Alliance (O.) True Press of March 1 says:

"The most popular and really the best of traveling dramatic companies commenced a week's engagement of three nights at the Opera House on last Thursday evening, and were greeted with the largest audience which they have yet played to in Alliance. It being understood that important changes had been made in the management of the company (one or two of the principal actors having been replaced by others not so well known here), there existed some doubt as to the company being fully up to its former standard of excellence. Those who enjoy a personal acquaintance with Mr. Blaisdell, manager, feel sure that any changes which he might feel called upon to make would not be for the worse, but to strengthen his already fine company. The superb acting of Mr. J. W. Carner and the excellent support he received in the beautiful play of 'Rip Van Winkle' on the opening night removed every vestige of doubt, and the universal verdict of our citizens is that Mr. Carner takes higher rank in the dramatic art than any actor we have ever seen here, and that Mr. Blaisdell has made a decidedly fortunate selection of steady improvement in his company."

The same paper of March 8 contains the following:

"The above company closed its season of three nights at the Opera House on last Saturday evening with a complimentary benefit tendered by a number of our leading citizens to the manager, Mr. J. H. Blaisdell. The largest audience we have ever seen in the Opera House assembled, by their presence as the popularity of the gentleman and the merits of the company. The performances that has ever been given here gave more general satisfaction."

AT POSTE'S OPERA HOUSE, Baltimore, Md., Miss Agnes Perry made her first appearance on March 10th, impersonating the title role in the play of "Agnes." Our correspondent, writing on March 18th, says:

"Miss Ethel has the personal advantages of a charming and expressive face, refined and graceful manners, and an aristocratic form, which combination is well set off by dresses of superb and material. As to the merits of her acting, opinions are divided, but mostly in her favor. A crude critic in behalf us remarked, 'She takes it too easy; she acts as if she didn't know what was the matter, and didn't care a darn either; she knows that she looks well, and that's enough.' Very true, there is a masterly management and exoteric force developed in her acting, but it is nice, it is natural, and it is sweet. Her repose is of the still and deep kind, though there is, indeed, too much of it. To sum up, the impression she pronounced her everything included the reckoning, a pleasing actress. Time and experience will eliminate her slight imperfections, smooth over her scarcely noticeable crudities, and develop her embryo power. Mr. Cowin was acceptable as Claude Melnotte, in Victorien Sardou's play of 'Agnes,' both in action and delivery, was strong and mercurial. Mr. Varrey as Harold, the rigid and cynical, but humane, Prefect of Police, was simply perfection. In the balance of the cast, Mr. Forbes as Monsieur Merle as Alfred, Mr. B. B. Hudson as Raphael, G. F. Fortescue as Bonnardin, H. Moreland as Cracowitch, W. Rubsell as Lafaille, W. H. Bryan as Ravel, and Miss Alice Stanley as Blanche were all more or less fair. 'Agnes' was given on until Saturday night, when 'Frou-Frou' was presented. The attendance, though somewhat affected by the Lenten season, was generally fair, and contained about the usual proportion of ladies and children. In this city, where so much is said of the compliments which M. Sardou has showered upon our nation, more particularly the very edifying statement that 'in America everything is tickted with its price—even to the honor of its women,' the very fine critical upon his subject in the last issue of the CLIPPER meets with the hearty approval of all who have read it. Even passing by the vile slander in utter contempt, does it not strike you that Sardou is casting stones out of an extraordinary glass house—being a Frenchman here, and a Frenchman! We regret that 'L'Oncle Sam' was not written and performed before Miss Ethel applied to him for a play. Victorien would have been poorer by ten thousand dollars. The English Opera Company declining Rose Hersee, began an engagement here March 17th.....M. W. Fake commenced an engagement of one week at the Holliday Street Theatre, March 10th, in a drama entitled 'Taking the Chances; or, Teddy Brady's Victories.' The play is of the ordinary sensational class, and contains one or two really thrilling situations. Mr. Fake was suffering from a terrible cold, in spite of which, however, his impersonation of Teddy Brady gave us glimpses of a very rare degree of infectious humor and of his natural abilities as an actor. Miss Olivia Rand, as Polly Pointer, was very spirited and entertaining, and sang a number of songs which were vociferously applauded. The balance of the cast met with acceptable treatment. Business somewhat indifferent. Gus Phillips and Geo. W. Thompson commence March 17th."

Musical.

THE ALLEGHANIANS, vocalists and Swiss bell-players (D. G. Waldron, manager), were at Green Castle, Ind., March 8th; Evansville, 14th and 15th, and appear at Vincennes, 17th; Worthington, 18th; Gosport, 19th, thence to Indianapolis, Franklin, &c., opening at Columbus, Ind., 23th; Greensburgh, 26th, under engagement. Mr. Geo. C. Hurlburt, their ("cold war-horse") advance agent, has taken to the road again after a three months' sickness, having entirely recovered.

H. S. HENRI, violinist, solo alto and B flat cornet player, advertises for an engagement.

M. P. ARNOLD, whose address is care of this office, writes songs to order and publishes several of the latest vocal novelties.

A B FLAT CORNET-PLAYER advertises for an engagement.

PROF. KORMINSKY, leader of orchestra, through a card elsewhere, thanks Col. Stillwell, of Anderson, Ind., for a violin with which he was recently presented.

WHITE, SMITH & PERRY, who advertise, will send by mail, on receipt of price, "Dobson's Banjo Instructor," and they have just published a new song entitled "Homeless To-night."

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE A. FLORANCE gave an organ concert at Watertown, Mass., on March 12th.

IN SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., the Fabbri Troupe gave "Faust" at the California Theatre, on March 6th. Marguerite was sung by Inez Fabbri with delicacy and taste, going far to reconcile the minds of those unable to see in her the physical ideal of the part. The Mephistopheles was Carl Speigler, whose first appearance was made on this occasion. Although he acted and sang very satisfactorily, he did not entirely fulfill the exalted reputation claimed for him. Anna Eiser made a pretty Siebel, and won applause in the flower song. Jacob Muller was an excellent Valentine, and Baccel a fair Faust, at those times when he did not overstrain his singing. On the 7th "Massaniello" was played with a ballet led by Madame Therese.....Miss Fannie Marston had an operatic and ballad concert tendered to her at Pacific Hall, on the 13th.....Madame Sutro has resumed her maiden name of Agatha Mandeville, in consequence of the divorce allowed Wm. Sutro. She sailed for Mexico on the 3d, to fulfill an engagement.

THE THEODORE THOMAS orchestra, reinforced by Rubinstein and Wientawski, are to give concerts at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, on the 20th, 21st and 22d.

MADAME ANNA BISHOP announces that she will go west early in April, and proposals for vocal recital concerts can be addressed as per card elsewhere.

"THAT COMICAL" BROWN is billed to perform at Richford, Vt., March 17; Sheldon, 19; Fairfield, 20; Bakersfield, 21, and Highgate, 22.

AT THE BROOKLYN LYCEUM, Kelly and Leon repeated their bill of last week to better houses, but still an improved patronage is necessary to ensure the success of this new enterprise.

U. CRISPINE, baritone, solo trombone and second violinist, who also furnishes music for brass band, wants an engagement. Read his adv.

"BOGAN'S SIMPLIFIED BANJO MANUAL," containing fifty-five popular airs, and the bell chimes imitation, handsomely bound in cloth, can be obtained upon application to Mr. Bogan, per address elsewhere.

THE CINCINNATI ORCHESTRA gives a concert at Pike's Opera House, in that city, on the 28th.

SHITTEMOSH STEPHENS, of Detroit, publishes two new songs, "The Boys Must Have It" and "Dennis, Dear, are You Forgetting?"

BURTON, who can be addressed as per advertisement, wants a tenor vocalist.

MUSICAL AFFAIRS in Boston, Mass., are reported by our correspondent as follows: "Miss Anna Mehlig proposes to give a series of three classical matinees in Mechanics' Hall, the first to take place on March 19th, the second on 2nd, and the third on the 26th. Mr. Nelson Varley will assist at each performance.....The New England Conservatory of Music will give an organ concert at Music Hall on Tuesday, 25th, at noon. They also give a classical concert on Tuesday next in Wesleyan Hall.....The second of the series of entertainments in Odd Fellows' Hall will occur March 31.....S. J. Lang's second chamber concert in Mechanics' Hall will be given on 20th inst. .....The Beethoven Quintette Club, assisted by Anna Granger Dow, Ernst Perabo, J. C. D. Parker, will give a series of concerts during April and May.....The Jubilee Singers of Nashville, Tenn., at Tremont Temple on the 13th to a large audience. They will give further concerts during the coming week.....Hugo Leonhard and Julius Richberg give their fourth classical concert in Wesleyan Hall, on Friday, 21st inst."

THE BUSSELTEEN CONCERT TROUPE performed at Toledo, O., March 10th; Detroit, Mich. 11th; Grand Rapids, 13th; Kalamazoo, 13th, and Milwaukee, 14th and 15th.

WHITE & GOUILLAUD advertise that they publish the latest comic songs.

Variety Halls.

HARRY ENOCH'S VARIETY OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, is meeting with the success which an enterprising manager deserves. Night after night the house is crowded by audiences who manifest the greatest satisfaction at the excellent entertainment given. Little Lotta Harony is the reigning favorite, and with a pretty face, elegant wardrobe, and excellent singing, does credit to the stage. Miles. Leonetta Roadcap and Henrietta remain, and with Lou Fraser, Dan Howard, the petite "Patty" Stewart, George Murray and others make up the company which, as will be seen, is a good one. George Murray closes on the 29th to join Henry Barnum's show as clown. A new sensation drama will be produced on the 31st, introducing a novelty never before seen on the stage, we are told.

THE VARIETY COMBINATION from the St. James Theatre, Boston, performed at Mechanics' Institute, St. John, N. B., on the 13th inst.

DAVID HAWLEY, gymnast, through a card elsewhere, challenges any member of the Matthews family, or any other gymnast, to turn triple backward somersaults from a trapeze bar to a mattress for $500 a side.

BENCINI & CAVLERY, double clog, song and dance performers, &c., advertise that they can be engaged after April 1st.

AT THE BOWERY, a variety theatre in Salt Lake City, Utah, the following composed the company during the week ending March 8th: Nellie Whitney, song and dance; John Jenkins, clog, also song and dance; Jennie Holtzer, vocalist; John Cook, jig-dancer; the Sutton brothers, clog-dancers and Ethiopian comedians; Thomas Croft, solo-cornet-player; H. R. Archer, Dick Brown and Charley Sutton, Ethiopian comedians.

W. E. CAVANAGH'S COMBINATION OF NOVELTIES, engaged expressly for the Academy of Music, New Orleans, La., where they are to appear in burlesque and spectacular plays, supported by the regular company, left New York on March 17th, and will commence their performances on the 24th. The following is a list of the company: M'lle Fontainebleau, Sallie Mason, Baby Benson, Jennie Benson, Blanche Selwyn, Flora and Jennie Weston, Susie Starr, M'lle Therese, Johannah, Josephine, the Misses Osborne and Vivian, John Morris, "mystic change" performer; George Knight, Eugene Gorman, James Fish and William Carleton. Combinations, stars and artists desiring engagements at the Academy of Music may address as per card in another column.

W. JACKSON, lessee of Ulman's Opera House, Williamsport, Pa., who had been running a variety show there, is charged with having departed on March 10th, leaving many members of his company minus funds, and board and other bills unpaid. On March 15th a benefit was given the performers, to defray their expenses home.

AT BUCHANON'S OLYMPIC THEATRE, Memphis, Tenn., the business has been excellent. The company is composed of Nellie Seymour, lightning change artist; Ida Morton, dancer; Mme. Pauline, character changer; M'lle Rosa and Ophelia Starr, danseuses; Lizzie Buchanon, danseuse and vocalist; Emily Tremont, vocalist; Maggie Louise, song and dance; Boyd and Scott, song and dance; Billy Banks, comedian; Emerson, Jr., song and dance; Al. Griffith, comedian; Jas. Taylor, banjoist, with Chas. O. White as general supervisor. M'lle Rosa, Ophelia Starr and Billy Banks closed on March 12th. Ella La Rue and Walter Gale are underlined to shortly appear. Chas. O. White, stage-manager, will resign on the 24th inst., and go to Hot Springs, Arkansas, to rusticate. The bands of all the theatres of the city were serenading on the night of the 8th inst., and in their rounds paid their compliments to Mr. White. At his solicitation a dirge was played in memory of those of the profession who have lately been called to their last resting-places, Aline La Favre, Emmazetta, Hen Mason, Nell Rogers and C. H. H. Broome.

AT BARTINE'S OPERA HOUSE, Dayton, O., business is very brisk. Miss Anna Hindle put in an appearance on March 10th. The balance of the company is composed of Tommy Winnett, bones; Bartine, interlocutor, and Cincinnatus (the song and dance artist; as tambo. In the olio are M'lle Emma, the ceiling-walker; Brown and Sanford, gymnasts, the former turning a forward somersault from his knees; Millie Baker, Lottie Lynn, Walter Gale, Harry Bernard, &c. Cincinnatus" in his songs and dances is encored three and four times of an evening. He leaves for Detroit.

DELEHANTY, HENGLER & SPAULDING closed a successful season of six weeks at Holyoke, Mass., on March 15th. The two former start with Tony Pastor's Traveling Combination on April 7th, and Spaulding will reorganize his troupe of bell-ringers to start on the road about April 1st, with Georgie Dean Spaulding, harpist, as the leading feature.

AT TOOKER'S NORFOLK, VA., VARIETIES, Burt Wayne, song and dance, and M'lle Grace, statue-performer, closed on March 12th.

THE FREEMAN SISTERS, now performing at St. Louis, Mo., will shortly return to New York to join Tony Pastor's traveling combination, which starts upon a tour on April 7th. The company will visit all the principal western cities and towns here during the late summer time, and his company performed a series of most successful engagements. The present organization will, we think, in point of artistic merit, surpass any hitherto on the road.

LING-LOOK, "Fire King," and his brother, Yamadeva, contortionist, who can be addressed as per advertisement, are prepared to accept engagements after March 31.

HARRY C. MELVILLE, serio-comic vocalist, can be addressed care of this office, wants an engagement.

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT to the memory of Tony Harvey from the Kernan brothers, of Baltimore, is published in another column.

VARIETY ARTISTS and twenty-five ballet ladies are wanted for the Metropolitan Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo. See advertisement.

THE OPERA HOUSE, Saginaw City, Mich., will be opened on March 16th, and performers are advertised for.

CHAS. AND MARIAN YOUNG, vocalists and character duetists, can be communicated with through their agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

SHAY AND DAILY, character artists, commence a two weeks' engagement at the Opera House, Rondout, N. Y., on April 1st, after which they can be engaged. Address them care of this office.

VARIETY PERFORMERS and musicians are wanted for the Opera House, Rondout, N. Y. See advertisement.

CINCINNATI VARIETY NEWS, up to the 14th, is given by our correspondent as follows: "At the Pacific Garden this week the new appearances have been the Ballent Family, Flora, Harry and Master Julius; M'lle Russellini, singer and dancer; and Murtz, Turner and Hicks, gymnasts and trapezists. Joe Bell was also billed, but his coming has been delayed a week. The Ballents are only tolerable as vocalists, the lady in particular having been denied by nature that desideratum for a singer, a sweet voice. Miss Resselini, after one appearance, was laid up by a sick spell, and has not since been on. Turner quit after a night or two, and Murtz and Hicks have been doing double acts. Mlle. Fiorintaine, in addition to club-swinging, has done a balancing-bar act. Duverney, the contortionist, is the best feature of the programme. Charley Hanlin commenced a re-engagement last night. The show has hardly been up to its standard this week. J. W. Berkley and Frankie Lee closed on the 9th, going to Pittsburgh.....At the Olympic Billy Hendley and John Wilmer appeared, and Charley Hanlin closed. Prof. Lawrence, James Davis, Harry Wilton, Alice Ross and Minnie Warner remain. Gussie Keating is to be added on Monday.....At the Vesse Street Varieties the new people this week are Kitty Watkins, a negro character vocalist; Mattie Allston, vocalist, and Hattie Wilton, another singist. George Davenport, Johnny Weaver, George Morton, Fred. D. Harris, Fannie Florence, Nellie Georgia and Nellie Holloway remain."

AT BARTINE & CO.'S Opera House, Dayton, O., there has continued a rush of business. The new appearances on the 10th were Jennie Hindle, in her male character songs, who made an immense hit; Walter Gale, character vocalist, who sings sweetly, and Ciara Gladstone, vocalist. Minnie Silvers and Lottie Winnett were both too ill to appear last week. Harry Bernard and Olivia Bernard closed on the 10th. "Cincinnatus," Tommy Winnett, Charley Bartine, Joe Mell, Brown and Sanford, Millie Basoure, Mlle. Emma and Minnie Baker comprised the balance of the company. Mlle. Emma, the contortionist, ran closed on the 15th, and are in Indianapolis this week. On the 17th the new appearances were to be William Sparks, cannon-ball performer; Dollie Sherman, danseuse; Nellie Clark, club-swinger, and Emma Whiting, vocalist. On the 24th, Mons. Duverney and Mlle. Florintaine, contortionists, and Harry Wilton, vocalist, appear.

THE PROGRAMME announced for the week ending March 15th, at the National Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., succeeded in drawing fair houses. During the week Prof. Whetony's burlesque of "Masonry Exposed" was produced with new costumes, etc., and admirably placed on the stage; Hawley and Misco created a sensation by their wonderful trapeze performances, and the company in general gave satisfaction. On the evening of the 10th, Misco, one of the gymnasts performing here, had a narrow escape from breaking his neck while disporting on the trapeze. He fell a distance of fifteen feet, and landed among the benches, but only received a slight bruise on his head. On Friday evening, the 14th, on the occasion of the benefit of Jake Budd, an immense crowd was in attendance. During the evening a number of amateur jig-dancers competed for a silver cup, the prize being carried off by Mr. Sandford. The departure on the 16th were the Weston Sisters, Lizzie Barrett, Harry Price, Leon Whettony, Hawley and Misco. Mons. Datallie, Mlle. Angelo, Zephyr, Tout Petite, Frank Jones, Senorita Philomena and Louisa Bliss appear on the 17th.

AT THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, Indianapolis, Ind., the performances for the past week opened with "The Red-Riding-Hood Minstrels," a female first part, with Charlie Armstrong as boss, Both. Denting as Bambo, Tom Waddle as interlocutor, and twelve young ladies, among whom were Carrie Chrissie, Celia Berry and Nell West, vocalists. Nellie Taylor in her bouquet of melodies, J. H. O'Neil with specialties, Nellie Clark's Indian-club swinging, Alice Bateman and Billy Noonan's double song and dance, Dollie Sherman's fancy medley, Prince Sadi d'Jalma, contortionist, remain. The new comers were the Marretta Sisters and the Van Zandt Brothers, gymnasts. The first named are exciting favorites as performers. Prince Sadi d'Jalma created a great furore. He closed on the 15th and goes to Philadelphia; Dollie Sherman goes to Cleveland; J. H. O'Neil, Billy Noonan and Alice Bateman to Pittsburgh. Lula Mattice, vocalist, and Mlle. Emma, the ceiling-walker, are underlined for the 17th. Business immense.

MISS LILLIE BERTINE, burlesque quick-change artiste, commenced an engagement at the Odeon Varieties, Paterson, N. J., on March 10th. She was laboring under a severe cold, and was so hoarse that she was compelled to cancel her engagement after her first night's performance, and returned to New York, where she will rest until perfectly recovered.

LEW DAVIS and Bobby McKown, song and dance men, have formed a copartnership, and will hereafter be known as McKown & Davis.

SHERIDAN AND MACK are to perform at Hartford, Conn., March 31 and 28, and Harry Bleodgood's combination will show at Hartford, Conn., March 19.

MCKEE & ROGERS' COMBINATION performed at Hartford, Conn., March 13; Pittsfield, Mass., 14, and will be at Rochester, N. Y., the 21st.

PROF. HARLEY will visit Japan this summer, and probably bring over to America a troupe of female gymnasts.

JOHN T. KELLY, the jolly Irishman, made his reappearance at the Detroit, Mich., Theatre Comique on the 10th, and met with a grand reception, as he is certainly one of the best Irish character actors ever here. Billy Pastor still pleases the immense audiences in the highest degree. To-night, Geo. Wilson, the popular comedian, takes a benefit, when the following talent will assist: Geo. Mackey, club swinger; Joe Norton, jaggler; Sperry and Day, double clogging. It is an unusual occurrence for any performer to gain and keep so many admirers as Mr. Wilson, and they all part with regret, but hoping he'll meet with the best success in his new field. Billy Pastor closes the 15th, going to Troy, N. Y. Eunice Dunlap and Jack Noon also close, going to Bay City. On the 17th Miss Lou Francis and Cincinnatus are billed. So wrote our correspondent on March 14th.

THE WASHINGTON VARIETIES, Providence, R. I., has refitted a fine business during the past week, notwithstanding strong rival attractions. Charles and Laura French appeared on the 10th. Sallie Swift commenced a four weeks' engagement on the 17th. Hooley and Christie closed on the 15th, and go to Manchester, N. H. Bowman and Harris had a rousing benefit on the 13th. The Varieties company gave an entertainment in Harrington's Opera House, on the 15th, to a small house, owing to bad weather.

THE PEOPLE'S THEATRE, Kansas City, Mo., is doing a rushing business of late, we are told. The new appearances were Prof. Alliston, prestidigitateur; Oglesby and Arthur and the Wesley Pankomime Troupe. Oglesby and Arthur, who seem to be very useful people, first did a very fine song and dance, and the next week were acting in "Cinderella" in a style commendable. The cosey little theatre is rich, and Gussie Sandcraft, Nellie Melrose and Kitty Leroy do their parts skilfully, while Guy Linton, as Buttons, is a most capital page. The Wesleys are presenting the pantomime "Scampenio." Lucy Adams has at length recovered, and was warmly greeted. Harley and Marropes at Deagle's, St. Louis, on March 16th, as also Miss Blanche Stanley, who goes thence to the Front Street Theatre, Baltimore. Oglesby and Arthur close on March 15th. Ned Duncan, treasurer, is still suffering from a badly sprained ankle. Captain Phelan did some fine shooting at this theatre on the occasion of D. R. Allen's benefit. With a rifle he shoots a wine-glass, then an apple from J. T. Murphy's uncovered head, and finishes by shooting a half-dollar piece from his friend's hand at a distance of thirty feet. Edith Blande opens here March 20th.....The new opera-house at Dennison, Texas, that was to have been occupied by a company from this city, was blown down by a strong wind lately and totally destroyed. So wrote our correspondent on March 15th.

DAN EMMET reopens the Comique, Buffalo, N. Y., on March 31st. Among the company will be M'lle Estella and the Varella brothers.

AT THE METROPOLITAN, St. Joseph, Mo., the fresh appearances of the past week were Mod Campbell, who assumed the stage-management, and the Leon brothers, gymnasts. Ella La Rue was the only departure.

TOM HARPER, the one-legged dancer, wishes an engagement. Address him as per advertisement.

TALENT IS WANTED at all times by the manager of the Globe Theatre, Troy, N. Y., who inserts his card among our amusement ads.

MLLE. LOUISE BOSHELL, Miss Frankie Bortley, Ben Hays, Charley Gleason and J. W. Berkley were the new people at Fred. Alma's American Theatre, Pittsburgh, last week. Mlle. Boshell's slack-wire performance is very cleverly executed, and gizmps the lady as a fine artiste in this branch of the profession. The songs and dances of Miss Berkley are fine, with a neatness and finish that must command approbation from a refined audience. Her costumes evince good taste, and her manner is graceful and ladylike. Charley Gleason's songs have at least the merit of being new here, and they are satisfactorily rendered. His banjo-playing is commendable. Ben Hays is a negro comedian of decided merit, and his exceedingly funny way of doing and saying things exacts much merriment. J. W. Berkley is a meritorious Ethiopian delineator, everything he does giving satisfaction. The balance of the present company are Mlle. Geraldine, Master Leo, George Leopold, Mlle. Cortie, Miss Patti Rosa, Tommy Murray, Castelliotti, the Russells, Olmstop Sisters and Tilly Prestage. Business good. The Carroll Family had a benefit on the 14th, at which extra attractions were presented. Mike Kanane and Dick Carroll are advertised to be contestants in a clog dance for $250, the decision to be rendered before the audience. Gallagher, Fred. Hamilton and Garver, Pittsburgh men, have volunteered their services for this occasion. The Zig Zags, seven in number, Lizzie Riddel, Hurley Bros. and others put in appearance on the 17th inst.

HARRY C. WELLS is requested, through an advertisement, to write or telegraph to Dan Smalley.

THE LAURI FAMILY and Pete Lee have been the fresh accessions to the company at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., and the attendance some nights fills the theatre, and the aggregate business of the week will foot up handsomely. The Lauri Family, as pantomimists, have created a most favorable impression. Their work in the line is accomplished with great rapidity and a degree of perfection that can only be attained by patience and years of practice. During the week the Lauris appeared at the Academy of Music, Cleveland, O., on the 10th inst. Outside of the trapeze act of Mr. Hill, our correspondent says: "There is nothing in the bill so startling or attractive as to deserve comment. The Hawley Brothers, who have played a successful four weeks' engagement here, go to Fred. Alma', Pittsburgh, on the 17th. Johnny Jennings and Bobby Manchester go to Trimble's, Pittsburgh, same date. Business continues good. Manager Armstrong has secured the services of Mr. Harry Balkeld, violinist, and Mr. Harry Hardy, pianist, which makes a decided improvement in the orchestra."

LADY PERFORMERS, with specialties, and musicians are wanted by M. B. Leavitt, who advertises.

HAWLEY AND MILCO, gymnasts, who travel with Forepaugh's Circus during the approaching season, publish a card of thanks to the managers and performers at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh.

TALENT is wanted at the Globe Theatre, Troy, N. Y., as will be seen by a card among our advertisements.

MCKOWN & DAVIS, with single and double specialties, can be secured by managers of variety theatres or circuses. See adv.

GILMORE'S NEW OPERA HOUSE, Springfield, Ohio, is announced to open on Saturday evening, March 22d, with a full company. Talent is advertised for.

VARIETY ARTISTS are wanted for the Pacific Garden Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Address as per advertisement.

AT THE GRAND CENTRAL THEATRE, Philadelphia, the attendance was excellent during the week ending March 15th, and the management have every reason to be satisfied with the success so far met with by them. The Zanfretta Pantomime Troupe, Sam S. Sanford, Miss Kitty Henderson, G. F. Moore, James Taylor, Miss Ada Alexander and Tommy Turner were the new appearances last week. Sam Sanford, in his capital act of "The Wandering Refugee," was decidedly successful; and the clever banjo solos of Tommy Turner, the vocalism of James Taylor and Miss Alexander, and Dutch specialties of Kitty Henderson and G. F. Moore were much applauded. The Zanfretta Troupe appeared in the pantomime of "The Green Monster." Prof. Risley's complimentary benefit on the 14th was deservedly a bumper. Mlle. Zoe Zeonetti and Mons. Revenl, the La Markoes, Tommy Turner and Master George Brooks, concluded their engagements there on the 18th inst. R. M. Carroll, Master Eddie and Little Dick, in their specialties; Mlle. Geraldine, Tommy Lee and George Leopold, in their sensational trapeze act; the Romellis, gymnasts; Miss Carrie Laramie, serio-comic vocalist, and Miss Sallie Wesner, danseuse, appear there on the 17th inst. James Taylor's farewell benefit takes place there on the 21st inst.

THE ATTENDANCE at Enoch's Varieties, Philadelphia, during the past week was fair. Prof. J. J. Campbell, Mlle. Lucile, Miss Amanda Harper, and James Cooper and Harry Weeks were the new faces there last week. Prof. James W. Ward closed on the 15th inst. Harry G. Richmond, in his new interlude of "The Lunatics;" Smith and Wild, song and dance men, and Miss Carrie Avery, serio-comic vocalist, open on the 17th inst., and J. C. Stewart's operatic burlesque of "The Bill Poster's Dream" will be produced.

AT MORTIMER'S VARIETIES, Philadelphia, a fine programme was presented during the past week, attracting large audiences. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Sandford, Miss Carrie Avery, El Niño Eddie, G. B. Radcliffe, Harry Kernell and James Sheeran were the new appearances there on the 10th inst. The services of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Sandford were dispensed with after one evening's representation of their sensational drama of "Murdered in the Dark." The sojourn of Miss Carrie Avery was also very brief, the shooting of the Lucia trapeze performer at the Girrin Brothers and Mlle. Lucia will expire and they will at once sail for New York, arriving about April 9th.

G. F. ORRIN AND FAMILY are expected to arrive in New York from Cuba about April 9th.

FRANK MITCHELL, colored bareback and hurdle rider, contortionist, &c., advertises for an engagement for the tenting season.

A. E. BOYCE, rider, leaper and gymnast, advertises for an engagement.

JOHN ROBINSON'S MUSEUM, CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE were at Providence, Carroll parish, La., March 8th.

THE ORRIN BROTHERS AND MLLE. LUCIA, performing with the Circo Espanol de Felipe Castorienas & Co., did not open in Havana, Cuba, on Feb. 20th, as had been announced, as it was impossible to secure a suitable building, and the authorities would not permit a canvas to be erected within the city limits. They commenced a season at Guanabacoa, three miles from Havana, on Feb. 23th, and will probably continue to perform in the provinces until the 1st of April, when they will return to Havana, and will probably continue to perform in the city until the close of the season. The Orrin Brothers and Mlle. Lucia will expire and they will at once sail for New York, arriving about April 9th.

"BLACK-EYED SUSAN," with very much the same cast as its representation in the earlier part of the season—with the exception of William, now played by Edwin Thorne—opened the performance at the Howard, Boston, Mass., last week. In the olio, Gus Williams reappeared, giving some of his excellent Dutch character songs. Mr. Williams we regret to notice, is becoming somewhat careless in his performances, being a little apt to slur over his work at times, his dialect being occasionally quite indistinct. Harrigan and Hart were also new arrivals, and they gave their acts, "Little Fraud" and "The Mulcahey Twins," amid great applause. Cool Burgess was the only other addition of the week; but he is a perfect host in himself, keeping the audience in a roar all the time he is on the stage. E. M. Hall, with his banjo, Little Maggie Benson, the Frankenstein Mystery, Jennie Benson, and Sam Devere remained over from the previous week, and the performance closed with "The Rival Dutchmen," in which Gus Williams and Sam Devere appeared. James Vincent has rejoined the company. Last night Jennie Benson, Baby Benson, Tobin, with his Frankenstein Mystery, and E. M. Hall closed their engagements. Mr. Hall has been here five weeks, coming almost a stranger, but during that time he has made himself immensely popular through his really admirable banjo-playing, so that he never fails to get the heartiest applause. He will be warmly received whenever he may return. On the 17th there will be two performances of "Peep o' Day," together with the regular olio, and the Sanyeahs, Delahanty and Hengler, and Lizzie Stemple open. On Monday, 24th inst., J. H. Milburn and the Joe Brothers open. So reported our correspondent on March 16th.

THE NEW FACES at Joe Mills' Theatre Comique, Bay City, Mich., during the past week were Miss May Fielding, dancer; Miss Minnie Burton, ballad-singer; Miss Sallie Melville, serio-comic vocalist; Lizzie Brown and Master Wright. The attendance has been fair, considering the season is not fairly opened. Rosa St. Clair puts in her first appearance on the stage; she has a good voice, and if properly encouraged will rise in the profession rapidly. Master Wallace and his petite Flora in their specialties are unexcelled. They closed on the 17th, and go to Saginaw City. Miss Viola Clifton opens at Grand Rapids on the 18th. Geo. Leving and Minnie Moore open at Saginaw City on the 18th. The new faces announced are Sallie Wesner, J. H. Clarke, Annie West, Jennie Douglas, on the 17th, in addition to those announced in our last.

JIMMY CUMMINGS, song-and-dance man; Little Dot, change artiste, and J. P. Hill, the blindfolded trapezist, have their first appearance at the Comique Theatre, Cleveland, O., on the 10th inst. Outside of the trapeze act of Mr. Hill, our correspondent says: "There is nothing in the bill so startling or attractive as to deserve comment. The Hawley Brothers, who have played a successful four weeks' engagement here, go to Fred. Alma', Pittsburgh, on the 17th. Johnny Jennings and Bobby Manchester go to Trimble's, Pittsburgh, same date. Business continues good. Manager Armstrong has secured the services of Mr. Harry Balkeld, violinist, and Mr. Harry Hardy, pianist, which makes a decided improvement in the orchestra."

LADY PERFORMERS, with specialties, and musicians are wanted by M. B. Leavitt, who advertises.

HAWLEY AND MILCO, gymnasts, who travel with Forepaugh's Circus during the approaching season, publish a card of thanks to the managers and performers at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh.

TALENT is wanted at the Globe Theatre, Troy, N. Y., as will be seen by a card among our advertisements.

MCKOWN & DAVIS, with single and double specialties, can be secured by managers of variety theatres or circuses. See adv.

GILMORE'S NEW OPERA HOUSE, Springfield, Ohio, is announced to open on Satur

$500.00 Challenge

TO ANY PRINTER, COMPANY, OR SET OF PRINTERS ON EARTH, THAT THE Great American Engraving and Printing Co.

Can furnish more printing, better paper, better ink, better type, better engravings and better everything, FOR LESS MONEY, and SAVE MORE CASH in the outfit of any than any other LIVE or DEAD printer in this or any other world, moon, stars, planets—or any other man.

"FIGURES NEVER LIE."

They can't—Compare our prices—Examine our goods—Don't be deceived—Walk up to the captain's office and satisfy yourself. Let none come, however, without the rocks. No credit—No bad debts—No sheriff employed by the year. No dead beats wanted. Let them go to our friends around the corner.

MINSTREL CUTS, one hundred varieties, one, two and three sheet, $30 PER 1,000 SHEETS, white paper, black ink, or $65 IN TWO COLORS. Name the printer who will duplicate these figures.

VARIETY CUTS in great variety, one, two and three sheet, white paper, black ink, $30 PER 1,000 SHEETS, or in TWO COLORS, $65. Show me the printer that will match this. Don't cry black sheep.

MAGIC CUTS, Don't forget it, white paper, black ink, $30 PER 1,000. Two printing, $65 per 1,000. Who says no? Trot him out.

CIRCUS CUTS in from five to seven colors, $9 PER 100 SHEETS. Circus programmes, quar. mammoth, full size, printed both sides, $2.25 PER 1,000, CASH. If you know of any printer to surpass this, show him up. We want to see him. Twenty-five NEW Circus and Menagerie Cuts now in preparation, Streamers, etc., &c.

NO CHARGE

for engraving cuts to order, or crayon portraits, where large quantities of printing are wanted. Where is the fellow to beat this? Lead him out, trot him out—kick him out—any way to get him out—only let me look at his phiz.

PROGRAMMES, House Bills, Dodgers, Press Notices, Handbills, Tickets, Coupons, Date Bills, Window Cards, Contracts and miscellaneous work at prices to make you laugh. Fill the air full, they will cost but little, $50 FOR 100,000 little programmes, 4x9—and $40 for next 100,000. We say fill the air full—let them rain—let them pour. Hide not your light under a bushel.

MAMMOTH POSTERS at one quarter the usual rate. Streamer letters in stock, full mammoth, three cents a letter. SEND CASH WITH YOUR ORDERS, or stamp for catalogue. And don't flatter yourself that you can get printing here without money. We can't afford to make bad debts at these prices. Go to your high-priced printers for credit; they expect to lose one half and make their prompt paying customers pay the loss. Why are they all rich? Because why? Yes, that's the question. If they can afford to loose one-half their accounts and get rich, we can afford to work at one-half their prices.

OF THE GREAT

JOHN HENRY COOKE,

STYLED THE
Centaur Horseman
AND THE
WORLD'S CHAMPION
RETRO RIDER.

The success achieved by this highly talented artist, during his London engagement, has been UNPRECEDENTED IN THE ANNALS OF EQUESTRIAN FAME,
and fully realizes all that has been stated by the leading papers of the day that his horsemanship is unapproachable.

For the coming summer season he is under an engagement to JOHN H. MURRAY, Esq., at a salary of $200 per week, and to fulfill that agreement will shortly cross the Atlantic. For the tenting season, JOHN HENRY COOKE will ride

Invented and arranged by himself, and never before performed by him, nor any other person in America, and entitled

SAUTS PERILLEUX;

OR,

THE JUMPING JOCKEY

AND

WONDER OF JEROME PARK.

In course of this almost incredible aeriality of movement and matchless elasicity of spring, J. H. C. will make a succession of
ASTOUNDING LEAPS
FROM THE GROUND TO HIS HORSE,
LITERALLY FLYING THROUGH THE AIR, and finishing with
ONE TERRIFIC EXPLOIT, AT LIGHTNING SPEED.
To fully describe its wonderful and pre-eminent excellences is impossible, being ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT PARALLEL and, at same time, one of the
